MacMonnies' Fine Work
We Think Too Little
Perhaps, Like Alaska
Tim Healy Is Dead

— By Arthur Brisbane —

FREDERICK W. MacMONNIES has completed his bust of Whistler for the Hall of Fame, creating an admirable work that will make a visit to the Hall of Fame worth while.

With power possessed by no other sculptor since the death of St. Gaudens, Mr. MacMonnies shows, externally, as a sculptor must, the internal spirit and power of the brilliant painter.

If Whistler could have seen this work of his friend, MacMonnies, it would have satisfied even Whistler.

Thirty years younger than Whistler, MacMonnies knew him well when studying at the Beaux Arts in Paris, and later. The Hall of Fame should permit reproduction of the bust, regardless of copyright restrictions, at least for London and Paris.

Some complain that modern men do too little thinking. Perhaps there is too much to think about.

The continent of Europe is said to be planning, in Rome, a boycott to shut out American wheat. You might think a long time about that, and its consequences.

However, before worrying too much about European boycotts and hostility to the United States, remember conditions in India.

That country is always planning something against England. But at the last moment a Hindu sees a Mohammedan, they start killing each other and forget about England.

European nations will forget about America, and American boycotts on slight provocation. But they will never forget to borrow, if they can.

President Hoover is said to express "great hope for the future of Porto Rico, little for the Virgin Islands."

In buying those islands, according to President Hoover, "we acquired an effective poor house." Apart from the standpoint of naval defense, it is "unfortunate" that the United States ever bought the islands.

We paid $25,000,000 for those islands, which isn't much money. It should not be forgotten that Seward's purchase of Alaska, for $8,000,000, was called "Seward's folly."

We have got back that amount many times in sealskins alone, many more times in gold. Nobody would suggest selling Alaska for a thousand millions or for ten thousand millions.

---

As for the Virgin Islands, that territory, PLUS INTELLIGENCE, plus flying machines and submarines, could make the Panama Canal safe.

Some day, someone will attend to that.

Timothy Healy is dead, only 76 years old. He was a hard fighter for Ireland, in the days of oppression, and a good first governor-general of the Irish Free State.

He feared nobody and said what he thought, telling a Tory major in the House of Commons to his face, "The honorable and gallant gentleman is a wilful and cowardly liar."

He could give his best on a minute's notice. When news came of the Mitchelstown disaster, Tim Healy and Gladstone both spoke in the early morning, Gladstone old, Healy young, and both spoke admirably. Healy made enemies for himself, friends for his cause. The spirit of Ireland mourns another good fighting son.

A practically unknown horse named Grakle, starting with odds of 100 to 6 against him, won the Grand National steeplechase, with 300,000 looking on.

If the intense interest that such a race develops could be concentrated on some of England's other problems, they might be solved. Some Americans won large sums on the race. That will ruin them.

---

Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, arrives planning, it is said, with American banks to finance Russia's gigantic industrial undertakings.

It is surprising that our high finance should sit looking on, waiting for some Englishman to tell them what to do.

Bacon said: "I have taken all knowledge for my province."

The English banker says: "I have taken the whole earth for my province."

---

If Russia succeeds in her gigantic industrial experiments, it will include growing grain on a "production basis" that will save Europe the trouble of boycotting American wheat.

Russia may "peg" the world price of wheat at 50 cents or lower. On choice lands with "combines" that eliminate 90 per cent of harvest labor, Kansas can grow wheat at 30 cents.

If our industrialists put their intelligence, and our bankers put their money into agriculture on a big scale, we need fear nothing from Russia or any country.

ONE CAUGHT IN DARING HOLDUP

Stumbles as Four Flee When a Clerk Gives Alarm in New York Branch

New York, March 28 (INS —A daring Boston bandit mob staged a spectacular daylight raid on the 79th st. branch of the National City Bank today which was frustrated by the swift thinking of a clerk who sounded an alarm siren.

With pistols shooting lead, the bandits fought their way to the street when the alarm soared them off.

The four men who had entered the bank raced across the sidewalk to the getaway car parked at the curb. Another member of the group sat hunched over the wheel and the sixth man of the gang stood beside the car to cover his getaway.

One of the bandits was captured as he slipped while trying to scramble aboard the car. He gave his name as Robert Murphy of Boston and said his companions in the daring attempt to raid the bank were also from Boston.

NEW ORDERS TO GARRETT JURY

Should the record-making Garrett jury, which entered the 94th hour of its deliberations at lunch time today, reach a verdict over the week-end, the decision will be sealed and held until the opening of court on Monday morning.

Judge Elias M. Bishop had earlier in the day left instructions that he be called from his home in Newton Center if the panel agreed on a verdict during the day.

As the jury departed for its 12th meal this afternoon, the judge ordered the verdict sealed and delivered to a deputy sheriff in the event of an agreement.

Apparently unaffected physically or mentally by their long confinement, the jurors planned to take a ballot on church attendance tomorrow. In the event they are unable to agree upon a church, it was said they would be taken for a bus ride.

Judge Bishop's tenure in the criminal court ends with today's session. On Monday he will sit in the civil court, and will be summoned from his new duties if the verdict is reached.

Drink-Crazed Man Holds 12 Cops at Bay

Portland, Me., March 28 (AP)—Swinging an axe with which he had smashed out five windows, Michael Flaherty, 9 Freeman lane, today held a score of policemen at bay for several minutes. He was finally flown by a policeman who made a flying tackle and was taken to the police station where he was charged with drunkenness and disturbance.

Frozen Death

Tribune, Kas., March 28 (AP)—The blizzard along the Kansas-Colorado border in which five school children were frozen to death near Towner, Col., marooned a teacher and 20 students in the schoolhouse at Horace, Kas., for two days and a night.

Although suffering keenly from the cold and their enforced confinement, the Horace pupils came through the storm without suffering any serious ill effects.

Efforts were being made today to get two airplanes from Lamar, Colo., to fly to Ends, Colo., and get the 15 Towner school children who survived the tragedy in which five other children from 8 to 14 years old were frozen to death when a school bus stalled in deep drifts. It was feared some of

During the day he seemed content to relax. He spent a half hour walking with other jail prisoners in the yard after his lunch. He also sat and chatted for a spell with prisoners in a large lounging room, accessible to prisoners, awaiting trial.

Many have feared that probe of

The attitude of co-operation

Hathaway and his family now seem determined to fight to the last

Atty. Samuel I. Jacobs of Boston, who negotiated Hathaway's dramatic surrender, was quoted as having said he planned to open an office in Providence, where he formerly practiced, in order to be near Cranston jail, where Hathaway is confined.
It was also reported that the reports.

The defense points to the absence of an eye-witness to refute

The Romances Of Playboy Hathaway

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Fall River's playboy, Elliott R. Hathaway, lived for love. And his many romances and conquests stimulated further desire to keep on adding to his coterie of feminine admirers. Another article revealing the "love life" of the alleged slayer of pretty Verna Russell appears today.

Fall River, March 28—Playboy Elliott R. Hathaway was a "one-man show" with women.
He gave and he took.
Bewitching eyes and provocative mouths "got" him and he couldn't resist.
He reveled in feminine smiles and adoration and his appreciation begot appreciation.

SPORTED THE BEST

"Give me a bit of fluff for one evening and the rest is easy," he boasted.
And he made good his boast. He sported the best in his own clothes, and on his arm and in his automobile he sported dashingly. Girls fought over him and he loved it.

"KEEP THEM GUESSING"

Not so long ago he beamed as he repeated a tale of girlish jealously over him between two dancing partners at Rhodes ballroom.
And as they had it out with each other, settling personal claim on the affections and admiration of the playboy, young Hathaway stepped away and escorted another girl home.
"How do you do it?" two boy friends asked in all seriousness.
And quick as a flash, he replied:
"Say, women love it. Keep them guessing. Never let them know just how mad you are about them."
And he didn't. He never said no to girls who anxiously urged a definite answer from him; he kept on saying "maybe."
"Maybe I'm crazy about you. Maybe I'm not. Time will tell," he smiled an alluring smile, revealing, healthy, pearly teeth.
And his lady friends hung on.

TORRID LOVE MAKER

"He tried to make violent love to me—said he would marry me if I would be his."
"I told him to 'ring me,' and I didn't mean telephone. I meant a wedding ring."
Such was the picture painted of Elliott by Miss Margaret Kehoe, 20, now of New York city, who declared that she was but one of many girls to whom the young Fall River playboy paid court.
The girl, who formerly lived in Fall River, but is now a beauty expert for a chain of drug stores in New York, said:
"I went with Pinky steadily for three months. And the reason I quit him was that his love became too violent. He used to flash great rolls of bills and made all sorts of wild promises to me. I began to fear him, and I am glad now that I left Fall River."

RUSHED HER FRIEND

Miss Kehoe also told of a girl friend in Fall River to whom she said the dapper prisoner paid torrid court.
"That was after I quit him," she said. "Pinky took her out a number of times and tried his stuff on her. When she wasn't impressed, he told stories about her. I confronted him with them in front of my girl friend and her sister, a married woman. He let her alone after that."

(Read Monday's American for the story of the Playboy's first romances—with the daughters of two wealthy Fall River men.)

SWEETHEART SAT AT HOME

In Newport, R. I, David Duff, 23-year-old carpenter, sat before the radio. He was reading a newspaper. On the next day the same publication was to tell of the murder of his sweetheart —the girl he had spent Sunday evening with—the girl that— not too far off—would be his wife. As Duff retired Monday evening Verna Russell was being killed. He attended Verna's funeral yesterday. He went along "on Verna's last ride." He was still Verna's sweetheart.

relief rolls and 20,000 more persons are dependent on them. This list will be continued in effect during re-registration of the poor.
Both the mayor and Chairman Goodwin absolved the overseers of public welfare and other officials and employes of that department from blame. Both praised the overseers. Goodwin complimented them and Mayor Curley for so quickly correcting the situation when it was brought to their notice.
During the winter the relief rolls gained more than 3400 names, and the amount doled out this year to date is approximately $2,000,000.

"RACKET," SAYS GOODWIN

Anonymous telephone calls to the Public Welfare Department today told of persons illegally receiving aid, adding to information supplied by Finance Commission probers.
One man was reported to be receiving $10 a week from the city, in spite of a good job and a bank account of at least $2000.
Finance Commission investigators found men using their doles to buy radios and to pay for houses they were buying. In most cases these heads of families had obtained work after having been placed on the poor relief rolls.
"If aid had been withheld this winter pending thorough investigation, many mothers and children might have died of starvation or have been victims of suicide because of the existing conditions," said Mayor Curley.
Chairman Goodwin said:
"It is only fair to say we found nothing to indicate dishonesty among employes of the Public Welfare Department. They have been overwhelmed with work and a unprincipled people have taken advantage, and the whole thing is beginning to assume the proportions of a 'racket.'"

Madrid, March 28—King Alfonso has authorized a $60,000,000 loan to be arranged by a group of international bankers, headed by J. P. Morgan & Co., of New York.

King Alfonso

The purpose of the loan is to bolster the exchange until the government has succeeded in stabilizing the pesets. The credit to the Bank of Spain has been extended for a period of 18 months.
In monarchistic circles the loan is heralded as evidence of foreign confidence in the safety of the government. Republican leaders are said to have bitterly opposed it.

FULL BENCH TO ACT ON REFERENDUM

Two Petitions by Auto Association Refused Because of Emergency Clause

The Automobile Legal Association will carry its fight for repeal and a referendum on the increased gasoline tax to the Supreme Court, it was declared today.

"We do not agree with the attorney-general of the State that the new gasoline tax bill is not a proper subject for a referendum," said a statement issued today by Sidney S. von Loesecke, associate counsel for the association.

PETITION DISAPPROVED.

"The attorneys for the association are now preparing a petition for a writ of mandamus to compel the Secretary of the State to issue the necessary blanks to be used in securing the required number of signatures in order that the question may be placed upon the ballot."

Atty.-Gen. Warner had previously disapproved two petitions asking that the question be submitted to a referendum. The first, submitted by the association Thursday, was rejected as improper in form.

EMERGENCY CLAUSE.

The second was referred to the attorney-general by Secretary of State Cook with a specific query as to whether the petition was in proper form, and if the law referred to might be the subject of a referendum.

In his reply to the secretary of state Mr. Warner declared that as the bill was duly declared to be for emergency purposes, the law might not properly be the subject of a referendum.

BRIAND WARNS GERMANS

Paris, March 28 (AP)—Foreign Minister Aristide Briand told the French Senate today that he was going to pursue the affairs of the Austro-German customs treaty to the bitter end.

"On the day when it is no longer possible to count on the loyal execution of international conventions there will be nothing left," he said.

Replying to questioners, Briand asserted he did not waste a minute in raising the danger cry once he learned of the proposed agreement and immediately made the necessary representations to Vienna and Berlin.

He did this to indicate France's position clearly, he said, and to warn other nations.

Mulchin of the Milwaukee as they appeared on the deck of the Hamburg liner on her first call to the port of Boston to take on passengers. The greetings of city and State were conveyed to Capt. Mulchin. (Staff photo.)

PLANES CONVOY GERMAN LINER

Escorted by an airplane convoy and followed to the mouth of the harbor by the screaming whistles of harbor craft and city fireboats, the S. S. Milwaukee today left Boston on her first trip including the Hub as a port of call.

The big motorship of the Hamburg-American lines was given a civic farewell by Lt.-Gov. William Youngman, representing Gov. Ely, and Joseph Conry, representing Mayor Curley.

Among the group which waved farewell to the large passenger list of notables were many city and state officials. The German government was represented by Count Kurt von Tippelskirch, German consul in Boston.

Prof. J. Thayer Addison of the Harvard faculty was among the passengers for Hamburg, Cherbourg and the Scandinavian peninsula.

The S. S. Lady Rodney of the Canadian Pacific lines also left Commonwealth pier with a party of tourists for the West Indies.

Ex-Dry Agent Drops Willebrandt Suit

St. Louis, March 28 (AP)—A $1,000,000 suit Gus O. Nations, former prohibition agent, filed against Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former assistant attorney-general, in 1922, in connection with a series of articles she wrote about prohibition enforcement, today was stricken from the docket in federal court here for failure to prosecute.

Six Die in Fire

Marshfield, Wis., March 28 (AP)—Six persons were burned to death today in a fire which destroyed three business buildings and several residences in the village of Loyal 20 miles from here.

HE'LL BUNK ON STRAW PALLET IN BACK YARD

India's Leader Shuns All High-Hat Stuff, While for Taxis —Well, He Will Walk

Karachi, India, March 28 (AP)—When Gandhi goes to London for the second round table conference on India his only garb, he has indicated, will be his loincloth, spun by Miraben.

Gandhi has a horror of living in state so if Premier MacDonald invites him to stay at 10 Downing st. as his guest, the Mahatma will insist on bringing his own pots and pans.

NO PANTS FOR HIM

If the prime minister offers India's anchorite a soft, downy English bed Gandhi is expected to decline, it as he prefers to sleep in the yard of 10 Downing st. on a hard straw burlap mattress with only the stars as his covering.

Every morning at 4, if he follows custom here, and every evening at 7, Gandhi will lead his followers in prayer.

If the king should invite him to dinner he will go with head shaved and wearing the traditional loincloth and sandals and take with him his own ritualistic food in a tin pail with a wooden spoon.

Not only that, he will cart along a self-devised spinning wheel, and friends say he will insist on doing his "sacrificial" spinning while the monarch talks or eats.

WHEN HE WILL DIE

No matter where he may live in London, whether 10 Downing st. or elsewhere, Gandhi is expected to insist on walking everywhere in his usual clothes. He has not worn trousers in nearly 20 years, and he does not like automobiles or buses.

A resolution ratifying the Delhi truce between Gandhi and Viceroy Irwin was adopted today by an overwhelming majority by the all-Indian Congress committee.

As a result, Gandhi's threat to starve if the truce failed need not now be fulfilled.

White Woman Sues Chinaman for Balm

Charging that she had been deceived by Wallace Wong, a Chinese merchant, into believing that he intended marrying her, Mrs. Marion Parlier of Massachusetts ave. today filed a $20,000 suit for breach of promise against Wong in Suffolk Superior court.

According to Mrs. Parlier's bill of complaint, Wong asked her to marry him in December, 1927. The date of the ceremony was to be in March of 1928. Since that time, she alleges, Wong has married another woman.

QUAKE SHAKES ITALIAN TOWN

Ferrara, Italy, March 28 (AP)—A slight earthshock was felt here and at Migliarino today lasting several seconds.

Chimneys fell and several old buildings were cracked. There was some panic, but no injured were reported.

New York, March 28 (AP)—Three distinct earthquake shocks were recorded on the Fordham University seismograph this morning. Fr. Joseph Lynch estimated the distance at 5000 miles but said the recording was "unsatisfactory."

The first shock was registered at 7:56:13, the second at 7:59:28 and the third at 8:06:05.

3 Die as Cab Drops Through Open Draw

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 28 (AP)—Three persons were killed today in a taxicab that plunged from an open drawbridge into the Halifax river here. The bodies were recovered by firemen. Bridge tenders said the cab was traveling more than 50 miles an hour as it plunged into the river.

Wyoming Herder Is Lost in Blizzard

Casper, Wyo., March 28 (AP)—Searchers had little hope today that Charles Beach, 30 sheep herder missing since Wednesday night's blizzard, would be found alive. Beach has not been seen since he went to gather in his flock, 25 miles southwest of here, when the storm descended.

BANDITS RAID A CHAIN STORE

Saturday chain store robbers starting early today, invading a store at 37 Clarendon st., South End, as it opened, and escaped with $20 and some cigarettes.

Through the smart detective work of Alton Worley and John Claire, order boys, two men were arrested within ten minutes in a Warren ave. (South End) room. They were held as suspicious persons while other chain store victims sought to identify them.

Dennis Taylor of 35 Tremont st., Malden, manager of the store, also identified them.

Taylor told police both men had guns. Police said they found the money and cigarettes on one of the men but found no guns.

The boys followed the pair after the holdup, they told police, traced them to the Warren ave. room and then called police.

Boston Postoffice Contract Awarded

Washington, March 28 (AP)—The contract for constructing the postoffice and courthouse of granite at Boston today was awarded to the N. P. Severin Co. of Chicago, whose bid of $4,848,900 was low.

The contract requires that the building be completed in 720 calendar days from next Monday.

Colors Which Paris Now Combines

By ANN ARDEN

WOULD YOU think of wearing brown accessories with your gray costume? Well, that is only one of the delightful things that Paris suggests for this spring.

SINCE GRAY is a decided runner-up in the color race, you might jot down these notes for future reference. Black is good for contrast with gray. And, of course, gray is one of those nice neutrals that will carry off many of your mad color schemes with perfection.

BEIGE IS another neutral that gives infinite range for color experimentation. It is always charming with dark brown accessories but it can be very dashing when black ones are worn. Rust and coral are two bright shades that make beige gay—and try one of the season's lovely greens with any beige outfit you contemplate.

BLUE IS bigger and bigger as the leading shade of the hour. All the openings have stressed it in a wide gamut of tones. For early spring though, wear navy and white. It has a freshness that is perfectly fascinating. White jewelry, white lingerie touches, white furs on blue coats and other white accents offer themselves. Chamois is also smart.

THERE IS little neutrality in the present mode, but in the matter of color one may find neutral ground. Gray tones are getting on apace, and the charming gown pictured is smart for formal afternoon. A model after Vionnet in gray crepe, circular inserts form a perky peplum topping a skirt softly full, and of the correct length for formal wear. The bodice has surplice closing edged in ruffle of embroidered and scalloped white organdie, which also cuffs the full-length sleeve. The gathered belt ties in back. A necklace of chalk white beads is worn.

THE HAT is a brown, baku, with becoming brim from fitted bandeau, the pumps are brown kid, with snake skin trim, and the hose has a complementary grayish tone.

HAVE YOU wondered whether brown and gray actually make a good duet? If you have, let us tell you about a fascinating suit we saw recently. It had a reddish brown jacket topping a mannish gray woolen skirt. It is simply stunning and a yellow blouse makes a new blend between the two.

About People You Know in Boston Stores

By FRANCES L. BAIRD

The niece of President Thomas Garrigue Masaryk of Czechoslovakia was discovered today, quietly and efficiently selling lounging pajamas at Jay's.

She is Mrs. Adelaide Garrigue Neville of Belmont. It was her courteous and interested service to a customer that led to the discovery of her identity, kept secret until the customer wrote to Mr. Jay, thanking him for the store service. He was able to trace the sale to Mrs. Neville, and in expressing his appreciation for her good work for his establishment Mr. Jay added a kindly inquiry about her family, and asked about her former residence and situation.

Mrs. Neville is a slight, vivid brunette, with large gray eyes. She was delighted when shown the letter of appreciation for her services to the customer.

SALES RALLY SPEAKER

Harry F. Twomey, sales promotion manager of Jordan Marsh Co., is one of the principal speakers at the annual sales rally of members of the Sales Managers' Club and Executives' Club of the Boston Chamber of Commerce at noon today.

The other speaker is Leon P. Dutch, noted merchandising counsellor and sales executive of Dorr, Corbett and Dutch of Boston and New York. The speeches are being broadcast over WEEI at 1:15, following the luncheon.

CRAM GOING TO WEST COAST

Ralph Adams Cram, of Cram and Ferguson, will leave for Los Angeles shortly after Easter to give personal attention to plans for the memorial library which he is to build for Edward L. Doheny, oil magnate, at the University of Southern California.

The library is to be a handsome, large one, erected in memory of the late Edward L. Doheny, Jr. Plans for it have already been approved both by Mr. Doheny and the university authorities, and construction will begin during the summer. Mr. Cram designed the interiors of St. Vincent de Paul Church on Chester pl., Wilshire district, at the request of Mrs. Doheny, who worships there with her family.

A PROBLEM IN SHOES

If a horse cost $40 how much should his rider pay for boots?

Chester Hervey, manager of Coes and Young, is wondering about this since a horseback enthusiast came into his store to buy boots.

The customer from New Hampshire said he wanted boots exactly like those in the window, and after being fitted and the boots wrapped for him to take with him on the train, he inquired how much he owed for them.

"Thirty-five dollars," replied Mr. Hervey.

"Great Scott, man I only paid $40 for the horse," exclaimed the customer.

"But these boots will outlast the horse," said Hervey.

The man took the boots.

FILENE BOWLERS ACTIVE

Filene women bowlers, playing at the Hawthorne Alleys, Bowling Alleys have reached mid-season form with high scores.

The highest average score for three strings during the past year has been made by Alice Hartnett's purchasing office team, with 305, and the highest single score was bowled by Katherine McCormack with a 116.

High scorers at a practice session of the four teams, which are composed of five members each, were: Mary Connors, 94—82—101; Katharine McCormack, 85—87—98, and Babe McDonnell, 77—89—87.

The purchasing office team officers are Alice Hartnett, president, Mary Conners, secretary, and Tillie Holler, treasurer.

HAND BALL CHALLENGE

Robert Soucy, cloth coat buyer, and Ted "Jam Band" Lewis, credit manager of Scott Furriers, today challenged Samuel Werner, fur buyer, and Eddie Goodman, salesman, to a test of skill at hand ball at the Boston Y. M. C. A. on April 8.

The loser of two games out of three will be required to furnish dinner and theater party for the contestants.

STUDY RETURN PROBLEMS

Practical means of reducing customer returns of merchandise are being sought by a committee of members of the Retail Trade Board, headed by Laurence S. Bitner of Filene's. Other members of the committee the H. W. Gless of R. H. Stearns Co.; B. G. Hawkins, Jordan's; D. E. Moeser, Conrad & Co.; and Fred Vorenberg, Gilchrist's.

Many millions of dollars' worth of merchandise is returned to Boston stores annually, creating one of the most serious problems of merchandising.

GILCHRIST BUYER PROMOTED

Miss Constance Hanley, buyer of lamps, was promoted today to additional responsibilities at Gilchrist's when she was made manager of the new gift shop which opened in the center of the main floor.

GILMAN CONGRATULATED

Congratulations today continued to pour into the office of Joseph E. Gilman, president of Jones, McDuffee and Stratton, upon his election as president of the Boston Garden. He has been a member of the board of directors for the Garden corporation since it was opened.

PAINE OFFICIAL RETURNS

Folks outside the Paine personnel wondered why Franklin Livey's associates welcomed him home from a Florida vacation yesterday. We learned, upon inquiry, that he had sent crates of oranges to the fellows still on duty while he was away. His first question was "whose turn is it?" when he got back on the selling floor, sharing customers with Charlie Le Beouff, Vincent Collins, Eric Williams and Paul Gardella.

No Irishman Wins an Irish Prize

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Buffalo mechanic won Irin' prise on race run in England.

An Italian grabbed first prize an American second, a couple of Hungarians also scored and a Chinese laundryman copped a little gravy.

The Irish Free State sweepstakes holds true to the traditions of old Erin. Everybody got a piece of it except an Irishman.

The Buffalo man won over $800,000 and will buy the hoss that was for him. So he will be back at work the same time next year.

The next great sweepstakes will be the suburban handicap. The proceeds will be used to buy commutation tickets for rural porch climbers.

This industry hasn't been so good recently due to the fact that Wall Street brokers are sleeping in Bryant and Central parks in order to be near their work.

And Mr. Hoover is coming back home. He was on a bookkeeping trip. Things have been disappearing so rapidly around here that Herbert thought it would be a good idea to step out and count our islands. There might be one missing.

SLAIN GIRL'S TEETH 'PLANTED' IN RHODE ISLAND, IS BELIEF

2 PAPER CUPS NOT BY BODY WHEN FOUND

Evidence Strengthens the Theory That Miss Russell Was Killed in Massachusetts

By JAMES J. SMITH

Copyright, 1931, Boston Evening American

Fall River, March 28—The Boston Evening American learned today that, despite a thorough search by Tiverton and Rhode Island state police, parts of two teeth of Verna Russell, slain nurse, were undiscovered until some 50 hours after the finding of her body—primarily, it is believed, because they were not there.

In addition, on the same day the teeth were found, two paper drinking cups were found a short distance from the point where the girl's strangled corpse was revealed early Tuesday. The Evening American has learned on reliable authority these cups were not there when the body was found, nor at any time that day.

YOUTH'S STORY HIT

Further checking on the time angles has also disclosed that Elliott Hathaway, now in Providence County jail, charged with the murder of the pretty nurse, could not possibly have been in the lane at the time which he has stated he was there.

Albert Winward, owner of the estate where the body was found, has several times asserted Hathaway's story, as far as time goes, was incorrect and now offers new evidence to prove his contention conclusively.

A representative of the Evening American has also carefully checked the route which Hathaway is said to have traveled and the results have proved that he could not have been in the lane at the time he says.

NEW CLUES FOUND

This checkup, in addition, revealed to the Evening American that Hathaway probably did not meet Miss Russell at the hospital at 7:30 p. m. last Monday night. He was seen alone at a later hour and his actions indicated he had not yet met his partner for the evening.

Investigation at the Watupet Reservation, isolated site of young Hathaway's frequent "petting" parties, of which he boasted, also added convincing evidence that he could have visited there that night rather than a easily accessible lane off Stafford rd.

The finding of the paper drinking cups and, a short time later, parts of two teeth of the slain girl, has been one of the most remarkable developments in the case. The teeth were found on Thursday afternoon at 2:30, just 57 hours after the finding of the body.

LYING ON ROAD

They were lying in the gravel of the new roadbed of the lane, a short distance from the spot where the body was found. The entire area around the scene was thoroughly combed all day Tuesday and Wednesday by the state troopers and members of the Tiverton police.

There were no teeth in the road then!

By the time the teeth were found, Hathaway had driven to Boston, seen friends and hidden from police.

A neighbor, Jesse Platt, had gone over the road, near where the body was found, Tuesday in a thorough search for clues. He had been on his hands and knees and is insistent that there was no sign of anything in the road.

A short time before finding of the teeth, the two paper drinking cups were found. Albert Winward asserts that these cups were positively not there nor anywhere along the road on Tuesday or Wednesday.

RADIO HIS CLOCK

Winward, if anyone, is thoroughly familiar with the vicinity and would certainly have noticed the cups had they been there.

It is entirely obvious that if eyewitnesses and searchers at the scene could not find the teeth or the drinking cups on Tuesday or Wednesday that they were not there at that time.

Is there something behind this discovery, something unrevealed but important that should be brought to light?

Winward, during interviews with a representative of the Evening American, has revealed himself as a cultured intellectual type, interested in the crime insofar as a correct solution is concerned and keen and precise in his analysis of the situation.

He is a graduate of Harvard University and dallies at gentleman farming, in addition to his trucking business. He is also interested in radio and aviation and has his own private flying field and two planes.

By a strange quirk it may be that the fate of Elliott Hathaway, whether to be determined in Massachusetts or Rhode Island, will be settled by radio. Winward's interest in radio has enabled him to check his movements on the fatal Monday night by his recollection of radio programs.

He was able to tell a representative of the Boston Evening American to the minute what he was doing while young Hathaway was supposedly in the lonely lane leading through the estate.

"Hathaway's claim that he came to that spot in the lane and was held up is a lie," he said today. "I know absolutely that there was no one there from 10:30 Monday night up to a time I shall not reveal until I am asked in open court.

"I have made it my nightly custom to stand on my veranda with a flashlight with a 1000-foot radius. That night the moon was small but very bright. There was no one parked at either the south or north end of the drive from 10:30 until the time I shall not disclose."

Winward also related a new development in the second visit of Vernon Galvin, pal of the alleged murderer, to the scene. This was shortly after 7 a. m. Tuesday when he arrived with a state trooper from the Portsmouth barracks. Fall River police had telephoned the barracks and, aroused the trooper, who proceeded to the scene with Galvin.

FORCED ADMISSION

On the way, according to Winward, they stopped at Platt's house and secured a blanket. Then they pounded on his door and aroused him. This was shortly after 7 o'clock, he said.

"I went with the two of them and we came to the girl's body," Winward said. "I looked around carefully but there were no footprints. If there were any on the ground they would have certainly been apparent. Nor was the grass around there matted down or disturbed. I felt positive then and still do that the girl's body was thrown, dead, from the car."

Winward then related how the three stood about the body and he asked Galvin how he knew the body was there. Galvin had reported he found the body alone. He said Galvin replied, 'Oh, Hathaway told me he was held up in Stafford rd."

Winward insisted it was a long road, he says, and pointed out to Galvin it was hardly possible he would have found the body unless Hathaway had been with him. Galvin did not answer then, he related, but a short time later admitted Hathaway had brought him there.

They then went up to the house while the trooper telephoned. Winward related, and he had further conversation with Galvin.

"How about this holdup story," Winward said he asked Galvin. "Do you think the police are going to believe that?"

"I don't see why they should," he claims Galvin answered. "I hardly believe it myself."

Galvin then said and also later told police that young Hathaway came to his house at 11:15 p. m. on Monday night. According to Hathaway's story he could not have reached there and have been in the lane at the time he said.

An Evening American reporter drove over the route to Galvin's house in Belmont at., yesterday. At a fairly fast rate of speed the trip was made in 10 minutes. That would place the holdup in the lane at 11 p. m. or a few minutes afterward. Winward is positive no one was there.

Where was Hathaway at 11 o'clock on the fatal night? Where was he from 10:30 p. m. until he arrived at Galvin's house three-quarters of an hour later?

He was not in the lane because Winward was watching there from 10:30 until an unnamed time which entirely covers that period.

The Evening American representative, knowing the store where Hathaway purchased a pint of ginger ale on Monday night, has investigated there and learned that the youth was there between 7:40 and 8:10 p. m. on the murder night, and stayed there about 10 minutes.

READY TO DEFY DEATH

Elinor Smith, famous American aviatrix, shown at Roosevelt Field, Long Island, just before she took off yesterday on an attempt to establish a new altitude record which nearly resulted in her death. Miss Smith had forced her plane into rarified atmosphere when the motor went dead and her oxygen tube slipped. She lost consciousness, but regained her senses as the plane plunged toward the earth. Although the plane was cracked up in landing she saved herself from serious injury. (International Newsreel photo.)

MOTHERS HARD HIT BY LOVE TRAGEDY

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Fall River, March 28—Two mothers, overcome by tragedy, were today under the care of physicians. Mrs. Carl E. Russell, of Portsmouth, R. I., mother of the slain Verna, remained in seclusion today in her little green cottage.

And at one mother mourned the loss of her daughter, another mother grieved over the plight of her son, Elliott, held for the girl's murder. Mrs. Louis E. Hathaway was ordered to bed by the family doctor for a complete rest for the ordeal that awaits her—the trial for murder of her boy.

Mrs. Hathaway is convinced of her son's innocence.

Residents of Portsmouth, R. I. who turned out yesterday to pay last tribute to Verna Russell, continued today to mourn with the bereaved parents, as expressions of sympathy and condolence poured into the Bristol Ferry Road bungalow.

Hysterical over her daughter's untimely death, unable to watch the lifeless body lowered into the earth, Mrs. Russell was without strength today, weakened by sorrow and tragedy.

"No, no, don't take her. Don't take her from me," she sobbed at the grave yesterday.

Today she continued to sob as grim reality of the loss of her oldest child and only daughter took possession of her. Never has such sadness, tragically depicted in the funeral procession that moved away from the Little Brown Church and into the Bristol Ferry Road Cemetery, visited Portsmouth.

And men, women and high school chums of the girl sobbed with the family. Verna Russell has gone but her memory will always linger on in the little town where she came to live five years ago.

PRIZE WINNER QUITS HIS JOB AS PRINTER

Isola Del Liri, Italy, March 28 (AP)—Mario Scala, brother of Emilio Scala, whose ticket won the first prize of more than $1,300,000 in the Grand National Sweepstakes yesterday, today quit the printer's job he had held for 40 years when word came of the family's good fortune.

Mario and his aged parents learned of Emilio's prize from a Rome morning paper today, before Emilio's telegram came from London. The telegram reached them shortly after they read the paper this morning.

Mario commented: "He should not spend money foolishly on telegrams.

"Everybody knows us now," said Mario. "Now everyone says hello to me.

"I have been working for 40 years. I am 47, and now that we are rich I might marry."

Mario has been the support of his parents, although Emilio, who owns a coffee shop in London, has helped.

Mario's ambition is to have his own print shop. He said:

"We will clean up this old town as soon as Emilio gets back. We should like to give it a nice church because we are good Catholics."

New Laboratory to Make Cancer Tests

Pasadena, Cal., March 28 (AP)—The 1,000,000-volt laboratory of California Institute of Technology here is to have a brother, a radiation laboratory, around which was broken yesterday. It will be the armory for new weapons to fight cancer. For years the 1,000,000-volt laboratory housed the largest X-ray tube in the world, capable of operation at 750,000 volts.

GIRL'S AIR FALL MAY BE RECORD

New York, March 28 (AP)—Ellinor Smith, aviatrix, had a thrill, a crackup, a good cry and maybe a record regained in her history today.

The barograph of the plane in which she dived from a dizzy height over New York yesterday after a try for the altitude record has been sent to Washington for calibration. She escaped injury.

William Ward of the National Aeronautical Association, who examined the barograph, said there was a possibility Miss Smith went higher than the 28,754-foot mark set for women by Miss Ruth Nichols.

THIEF SNATCHES GIRL'S PURSE

Leaping out of an automobile, a youth seized the handbag of Miss Catherine McIsaac of 162 Roasster st., Dorchester, in Bowdoin ave. last night and sped away in the car before she could note his description.

The bag contained $23 and oredit coins on downtown department stores.

Miss McIsaac notified the police and special orders were sent out to all patrolmen and the flying squadron to watch for handbag snatchers in all parts of the city.

VERNE O. K. ON WILKINS SUB

New York, March 28—Jean Jules Verne, grandson of the famous French novelist, has made "au revoir" to Capt. Sloan Danenhower and the crew of the transpolar submarine Nautilus. M. Verne, through an interpreter, said:

"There is no doubt in my mind that, barring a hidden mechanical defect, the expedition will return safely, laden with honors they will have justly won. Even should a mechanical accident occur, I believe the men of the Nautilus will have the hardihood and resource unless to triumph over it.

"So I return to France, proud to have had a share in christening the reality of my grandfather's dream boat. The real Nautilus is far more practical than the boat of the same name in my grandfather's book."

M. Verne sailed aboard the Ile de France and will return to his home in Rouen.

BALCHEN FLYING BACK HOME

Corner Brook, N. F., March 28 (AP)—Bernt Balchen, famous aviator, and his companions, Randy Enslow and Merton Cooper, who conducted an unsuccessful airplane search for Varick Frissell and other Viking disaster victims, took off for St. John, N. B., at 12:30 E. S. T. today.

The trio came north to search the ice fields off Horse Island, N. F., at the request of Dr. Fissell, father of the missing moving producer. Mawing their base here they flew over the scene of the disaster and the shore line for many miles on several occasions. They reported each time that they found no trace of Fissell, A. G. Penrod, cameraman, his companion, or any of the other members of the crew which are missing.

Balchen took off from Boston in a Sikorsky amphibian and it was believed he would return to that city.

Cuban Ban on Papers Illegal, Says Court

Havana, March 28 (AP)—President Machado's summary closing in January of nine Havana publications stood condemned today as unconstitutional by unanimous vote of the 13 justices comprising the Cuban Supreme Court. The tribunal ruled that an old Spanish military order invoked by the President as the basis for his action conflicted with article 25 of Cuba's Constitution, which guarantees freedom of the press and which may not be suspended.

Tear Bombs Break Up Dreyfus Show

Paris, March 28 (AP)—The "Dreyfus fiasco," which placed the stigma of treason upon a French army officer who later was proved innocent, still is a burning question with many Frenchmen. ## FAMINE OF DRAMA IS WANING

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

THE FAMINE in flesh and blood still grips our downtown tabernacles of the drama. All is quiet and empty in the old village, and so it will remain until another six days have been deducted from a dull grey March calendar. But things are looking up—there is hope even promise. For, with Easter rejoicings left behind, a reinvigorated drama will lift its head for better or for worse. Four attractions are at the outer gate begging serious attention.

IN THE MEANTIME, with the exception of the Copley and its resident players in "The Last Hour," the ardent playgoer whose thirst is on the spoken word finds solace in what pours out of the sputtering radio. Taking its cue from ambitious Hollywood, the unseen player of the air now proposes to be seen in the flesh at box office prices. For this experiment Seth Parker (Phil Lord) and his Jonesport neighbors will dig out the old thumb-stained hymnal at Symphony Hall on Tuesday night and lift lusty voices of hosanna. And that, ladies and gentlemen, is the cream of the week's new entertainment in humanity that appears in person.

OF COURSE, these observations have small reference to that quaint thing we call the legitimate drama. Seth Parker and his gospel tunes may constitute all there is in personal appearance, but there are hundreds—even thousands—who prefer their drama in the old-fashioned way. These are the devoted disciples who lend their dollars and take their losses, with a smile or, at least, an amiable grimace.

IN ANOTHER week, if the long suffering playgoer can stand the test, more orthodox drama will overwhelm him in almost Biblical deluge. Opening next Saturday are Edgar Wallace's "On the Spot," at the Wilbur, and a return engagement of Philip Merivale in "Death Takes A Holiday," again at the Plymouth. Then, getting lightly as possible over Easter ham and eggs, the ensuing Monday brings Ed Wynn (also a return engagement) in "Simple Simon," and the Anita Loos-John Emerson play, "Cherries Are Ripe" at the Colonial. This latter selection, unless you haven't heard, presents the former movie favorites, Rod La Rocque and his wife, Vilma Banky.

SO MUCH for the immediate prospect, but what about after that? Will these four new ones tarry for the customary span and then depart in the same hurry as their predecessors of the last month, leaving us again destitute? You never can tell, but it is not likely. There are several embryo productions now in New York that threaten to try out here. Among them "The Third Little Show" with Beatrice Lillie as the principal performer. There are others, some so new that they are as yet untitled—others so old and precious that they merit that most dignified of all theatrical terms, the Revival. All of which is nourishing provender to a starved Rialto.

Scenes That Are Brightest and Funniest From Glamorous Land of Light and Shade

JACK HOLT AND CONSTANCE CUMMINGS
AS FAR AS Mr. Holt is concerned the situation appears to be pretty well in hand, with Miss Cummings abandoning all resistance. See it in the gangland picture, "The Last Parade," at RKO Keith's.

MARION DAVIES
REIGNING princess of comedy in filmdom, Miss Davies takes on new and broader responsibilities in "The Bachelor Father," bristling laugh picture of hour at Loew's State.

HARRY CAREY AND OLIVE GOLDEN
MERELY AN UMBRELLA in the jungle you might say. Still, with sun, rain and gnats to pester them, Mr. Carey and Miss Golden find it an instrument of comfort in "Trader Horn." (Majestic.)

BRIGHT THE STARLIGHT GLEAMS

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

"THE BACHELOR FATHER" raises up a whole family of laughs—the comic offspring of this screen comedy are too numerous to try to count. It is a grand stretch of joyous entertainment, with touches of pathos placed here and there, superbly acted and finely directed. That scintillating lady of the films, Marion Davies, is at her best in this brightest of her pictures. The film is a triumph for the brilliant star, for the director, Robert Z. Leonard, and for Cosmopolitan, the producers.

THE PICTURE rippies along with the liveliness of a rushing brook. It has speed, adept camera play, sparkling bright dialogue and a plethoric merit rare in the talkies. In fact, one less apt soon be good a story and as well balanced a cast in a long, long time. The motivation is exquisitely humorous. It skips a merry way over delicate situations, and seems never in danger of offending even a Puritan mind. The basic idea is packed with ribtickling fun; an English bachelor sends far and wide for his children to come under his roof. He is a crotchety chap; sow they take to him, and he to them, makes rare movie material. Gradually, the old fellow's crustiness wears down, due chiefly to the character and wit of Tony, a supposed daughter, from America. She falls in love with the bachelor's lawyer; and just when life seems rosiest for her, she learns she is not a daughter at all. Her impulse is to tell sweetheart and putative father; but she delays. Then she is branded as an impostor.

Ralph Forbes

IN HUMILIATION she leaves, intending to fly back to this country. Here is where the picture far surpasses the stage play in dramatic sweep and suspense. There is Tony taking off for America; swiftly we see in succession, the bachelor at his radio listening in, the lover racing in auto to the flying-field, and the airplane crash. All this works up to an exciting climax, and a pleasing finish.

AS TONY, MISS DAVIES is a new revelation of talent. In the lighter sequences she is immense; and where the threads of sentiment are woven into the plot, she acts with convincing naturalness. This makes Tony a vibrantly real impersonation, and at the same time proves herself a versatile actress of stellar ability. Easily she slips from merry mood to the emotional; and her Tony stands out as her best characterization to date. Tony is not only attractive and appealing, but an adorable lass. And intensely human.

COSMOPOLITAN CHOSE its players with skill. C. Aubrey Smith, who created the bachelor role on stage, is here in the same part, a perfect portrayal. The clever Hallwell Hobbes as the butler is superb; Ralph Forbes is excellent as the family lawyer. Other good ones are Doris Lloyd, Guinn Williams and Elizabeth Murray. Director Leonard takes high credit, also; he establishes a striking tempo which he maintains throughout.

"The Bachelor Father" rings the bell as one of the best and snappiest of the talkies.

MISS FARRELL is gangland's sweetheart in "On the Spot," at Wilbur next Saturday.

CANTATAS ON PROGRAM AT SYMPHONY

By MOSES SMITH

Orchestral and choral music again shared the program at the fourth concert of the Bach Festival at Symphony Hall yesterday. The Third Suite for Orchestra, in D major, and the Concerto for two Violins in D minor were followed by the Cantata "Ich bin ein guter Hirt" ("I am a good shepherd") and the first half of "Ewigkeit, du Donnerwort" ("Oh, Eternity, Thou Thunderous Word").

This mixed program, while of not uniform greatness, exposed the master at a high general level of accomplishment. The Suite has the celebrated Air by which Bach is exclusively known to multitudes; it also has other movements of charm and beauty. The Concerto has, in the slow movement, one of the loveliest melodies in all music; and the interplay of the two solo voices, while the quasi-improvised string accompaniment goes on inexorably, is the flower of Bach's contemplative Muse. Nor are the two fast movements far behind in the quality of inspiration. The Concerto was done with fine musical feeling by the soloists, Richard Burgin and Julius Theodorowicz, who were enthusiastically applauded. The accompaniment, under Mr. Koussevitzky, seemed to us over-discreet. But it and the preceding Suite were comparatively free from his usual mannerisms.

The cantata were by no means of pure gold. The soloists, Amy Evans, Margaret Matzenauer, Richard Crooks, and Fraser Gange, often had to deliver measures sounding dull to 20th century ears. Yet for the most part, their efforts, those of Mr. Koussevitzky and of the well-trained smoothly singing Bach Cantata Club prevailed and Bach sounded out in his mighty majesty and peaceful beauty.

The program had been painstakingly prepared and so far the most part very well performed with a single minor mishap. The subscription audience took its Bach diet with good grace, applauding the performers warmly. The program was an unusually long one, lasting more than two hours; but the usual exodus towards the end was comparatively limited. Bach—or a sense of duty—held the listeners.

TRULY WONDERFUL THINGS DO HAPPEN IN THE REEL LIFE

By TOM MOORE

The Policeman in "The Last Parade," at RKO Keith's

Suppose a policeman, coming suddenly on a scene of violence, sees the closest pal of a lifetime in the act of committing a crime. What should he do? He knows the strong bond of friendship that exists between him and the lawbreaker. He knows how his superiors would decide the question, how public opinion would be arrayed in judgment.

But the policeman is still held by the instinct which commands him never to betray a friend. He wants to be loyal to his buddy. He wants to live up to the oath he has taken. That situation confronts me in the Columbia picture, "The Last Parade." The thoughts came to me one day while we were making a scene using machine guns. I'll never forget that sequence; for something happened that made it sink in my memory.

Tom Moore

Said Miss Cummings to Jack all of a sudden:

"Don't start this scene, Jack, until you look at the ammunition in those machine gun belts."

Holt smiled at her and said:

"Oh, everything's safe. Don't worry."

Constance returned:

"But I have a hunch. Please go over and look."

It was after her friendly insistence that an examination of the ammunition was made. Several belts showed blank cartridges, from end to end. Then, Holt, running his eye over the very last one, paused. Almost at the end of the belt he discovered three cartridges that looked different, somehow. Picking them up, he pointed to the ends.

"Say, those three carry a kick in them. That's what they once used for sentries guarding prisoners and walking post. Called it guard ammunition, I think. The ball is almost entirely sunk in the brass shell. Pretty old cartridges, those. Guess I'll keep a couple for a souvenir."

Then he handed the remaining bullet to Miss Cummings.

"Thanks for the hunch, Constance."

JOHN GILBERT RACKETEER IN MOVIE

By HARRIS MORGAN

An excellent stage bill at Loew's Orpheum is backed up by a first-run film, "Gentleman's Fate," starring John Gilbert and made by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The picture is based upon a story by Ursula Parrott, who supplied "The Divorcee" for Norma Shearer. The picture is a real thriller, for Director Mervyn LeRoy has skillfully applied his cameras on situations built up with masterly hand. There is plenty of action, and it is very fast; and the tempo is a credit to a mighty good director.

It is a tale of gangster life. Gilbert is the chief racketeer, but by no means the chief actor in the film. For he loses first honors to the late Louis Wolheim, who, as ever he did on screen, here turns in a memorable performance. Others standing out for their achievement are Marie Prevost and George Cooper. Lelia Hyams and Anita Page add feminine charm.

The photoplay is worth seeing, the result for the most part of Mr. LeRoy's deft hand. And the myriad fans still mourning the passing of Louis Wolheim, should not miss this last task of his at Hollywood.

An exceptionally entertaining and widely-diversified stage bill matches the sterling fare on the screen. Stan Kavanaugh, well-known comedian, is the topliner. In inimitable manner, he offers a well-paced mixture of comedy songs, patter and "rags" and draws much applause for his efforts.

Nat "Chic" Haines, vaudeville's perennial comedy favorite, makes another of his welcome visits to Boston and with a capable supporting company prepares his ever-popular domestic comedy skit, "Hello Mamma." Surrounded by a talented array of femininity, William Seabury offers a sparkling melange of singing and dancing that is heightened by frolicsome touches. Speed Manning and Alotia Class, internationally renowned dancers, in a distinctive dance repertoire and Foy, Foy and Foy, of the famous Foy family, in a hodge-podge of hokum are other pleasing acts.

Several screen shorts and Hearst's Metrotone News complete the show.

Terpsichorean

HARRIET HOCTOR
MISS HOCTOR lends nimble toes to Ed Wynn's "Simple Simon," at the Shubert on April 6.

CHINESE LASS THE STAR

Anna Chang, "Diminutive Chinese Star of Syncopation," who is appearing in Benny Meroff's exuberant entertainment, "Carnival of Youth" at the Metropolitan, is a product of San Francisco. When six years old she started singing, and ere long she was well versed in American popular songs of the period.

Her first theatrical work came with Paul Ash at the Granada Theater in San Francisco. Later she appeared with the same maestro in Chicago and then again at the Brooklyn Paramount, where Boris Petroff saw her and engaged her for "Just Kids," in which she enjoyed signal success.

FAR TRAVELS THE SLEUTH

That Earl Derr Biggers' story, "Charlie Chan Carries On," has reached the screen, and yesterday had its first showing hereabouts at the Fenway. It will be the film feature also at the Scollay, beginning tomorrow.

The photoplay adheres pretty closely to the script. The tale opens in the Scotland Yard headquarters in London.

Marguerite Churchill and John Garrick sustain the love interest, with Warner Oland forsaking his customary "heavy" roles to play the title-role part. The cast includes Warren Hymer, Marjorie White, William Holden, C. Henry Gordon, Peter Gawthorne and Jason Robards.

Now the Loquacious Constable

RICHARD WHORF
BETTER THAN the play itself is Mr. Whorf's conception of the officious, bewildered local policeman on a big job. "The Last Hour" runs on at the Copley and Mr. Whorf furnishes the momentum.

Movie Clinch Goes Legitimate

VILMA BANKY AND ROD LaROCQUE
RIGHT OUT OF screenland comes Miss Banky and Mr. LaRocque to test their talents in the oral drama. They are co-stars in "Cherries Are Ripe," announced for the Colonial on Monday, April 6.

BOSTON GIRL AT COPLEY

Cyne Davis, pretty and talented daughter of Frank Hookalio, is the latest acquisition to the ranks of the new Copley Players. Miss Davis, who recently scored a hit in her stage debut, has been assigned by Director E. Cowles Strickland, to the important task of understudy to Carolyn Humphries, who has the only feminine role in the production of Charles Bennett's mystery thriller, "The Last Hour," now playing at the Copley.

Miss Davis was born in Boston and attended Memorial High school in Roxbury. Later she enrolled at Boston University, where she took an active part in all of the productions put on by the university players. On several occasions Miss Davis directed as well as appeared in the plays.

The young lady has also been heard often over the radio, having interpreted the leading roles in trailers utilized to herald talking film productions. She has also contributed dramatic readings before the microphone.

BEAUTY AIDED BY DANCING

Dancing is an effective aid to beauty, and women can improve their physical appearance in a short time by systematic dancing, and should indulge in it for health's sake, if not for pleasure. This is the advice of Harriet Hoctor, dancing star of Ziegfeld's "The Three Musketeers" and "The Show Girl," who is appearing with Ed Wynn in "Simple Simon," coming to the Shubert on Easter Monday night for a limited return engagement.

"Few people reGard dancing as anything but a pleasurable pastime, when as a matter of fact it is more beneficial in the development of the body than calisthenics," Miss Hoctor explains. "Dancing is beneficial because it affects all parts of the body and removes causes of bad blood circulation, usually responsible for poor complexions. I advise all women and girls to dance whether they are pretty or not, because dancing is as healthful as it is beautifying."

Good Story; Hollow Response

HELENE CHADWICK AND SLIM SUMMERVILLE
DEEDS NOT WORDS is the demand of Miss Chadwick from Mr. Summerville. You can see at a glance that the narrative leaves the lady very much in doubt. It's in "Bad Sister" at RKO Boston.

NANCY CARROLL GIVEN 'STREET SCENE' LEAD

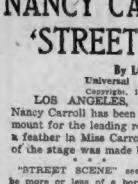
By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

LOS ANGELES, March 28—Pretty, petite, red-haired Nancy Carroll has been borrowed by United Artists from Paramount for the leading role in "Street Scene." This is decidedly a feather in Miss Carroll's cap, and interesting, since a search of the stage was made before Miss Carroll was finally signed.

"STREET SCENE" seems to be more or less of a borrowing affair. King Vidor, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's popular director, has been engaged by United Artists to direct. I shall be very anxious to see what Mr. Vidor does with Nancy Carroll. She is a fine little actress and when she has had good vehicles she has given a really good account of herself, for instance, "Laughter" and "The Devil's Holiday." Elmer Rice, author of "Street Scene," which, as you probably know, was a Pulitzer prize-winning stage play, is preparing his own treatment.



Louella O. Parsons

IF YOU HAVE any doubt as to the popularity of Ann Harding you should hear the count on the radio letters that we have received. Other stars have built slowly for fame, but Ann seems to have jumped right to the top with "Holiday." She must have settled her difficulties with RKO-Pathe, for [illegible] Rogers has borrowed Peggy Hopkins Joyce Milton from First National to direct her in "The Little Flat in the Temple."

A FEW little things heard in passing. Dolores Del Rio will probably check in at University City this next few weeks to play the lead in "The White Captive." At least she has been invited to add the feminine interest to "Ourang," the George Milford picture for which the exteriors were made in Borneo. Noel Coward, famous actor and playwright, is reported to have signed to come to Hollywood. United Artists is said to have bought one of Ursula Parrott's other books. Report is that there was a three-cornered discussion between Paramount, United Artists and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer over this particular book.

I HEARD with interest that Elsie Janis is writing a magazine story called "Ex Actress." Elsie, who need not be an "ex" actress unless she chooses, she looks as young and well and is in such good health is responsible for the following witticism. She calls herself one of the "ex-odus." Not bad, is it? Miss Janis is now far more interested in her writing than she is in acting and she is being called in frequently on conference with the various directors and producers.

HOW DO you like "The Foolish Forties" as a title? Sounds as if it would be possible to get plenty of good comedy. Ford Sterling is making the picture with William Watson directing at Christie's. Charles Ruggles' next story is to be filmed in New York. It is called "The Girl Habit." Eddie Cline goes East to direct. Derick Fairman, who comes from the New York stage production, "The Best of Families," has signed on a long term contract with Universal.

THE JACK WARNERS are on their way to New York and Atlantic City. Warner Brothers' Eastern convention is being held there April 20. After Jack hears what the East has to say about Warner Brothers' pictures he will return West, bringing with him the two Warner brothers, Abe and Harry. All of them will then go to San Francisco, where the Western meeting of the clan will be held April 28. While in the West Harry and Abe will formulate plans for the coming year.

FRIENDS OF Jimmie Gleason are telling a funny story about him. He has been down at Agua Caliente playing the part of a tramp in "The Whoop-De-Doo Kid" with Eddie Quillan. His makeup was grotesque and disguised him so completely unless you took a good look at him you would never guess it was our friend Jimmie. Some of his movie friends were down at Agua Caliente attending the races, and Jimmie, in rags and tatters, went and sat close to them, annoying them and causing several of them to change their seats and get away from him.

Fanciful Figures, Graceful and Grim, in Week's Films

CAROLE LOMBARD
CHEERFULLY, Miss Lombard gives smile and zest to "Man of the World," now at the Met.

LOUIS WOLHEIM AND JOHN GILBERT
ROUGH WEATHER for Mr. Gilbert, if you can believe pictures, but his friend, Wolheim, urges nonchalance and a cigarette for relief. It's a part of "A Gentleman's Fate" at Loew's Orpheum.

FIFI DORSAY
MISS DORSAY is the flirtatious maid of "Mr. Lemon of Orange," at Olympia and Uptown.

MAT CHAMPS AT HOWARD

In keeping with its custom just at this season of the year, the Old Howard will through next week stage a wrestling program under the direction of Paul Bowser, Boston promoter. Every afternoon and night special matches will be arranged, introducing among others, Stanley Stasiak, "The Lion of Poland," and Fred Moran, light-heavyweight champion of the United States navy. Both these men are ready to meet all comers and will forfeit a dollar a minute to any man they fail to throw in ten minutes time. Several wrestlers have already signified their intention of accepting the challenge of these stars.

Billie Shaw

The Mutual attraction is the "Round-the-Town" company, headed by Fred Binder and Mike Sacks. In the burlesque will be Lew Petel, Madeline LaVern, Jackie Teeters, Helen Kennedy, "Bill" Shaw and The Hamlets.

The continuous bill will include Chilton and Thomas, and Moran and Blake. The pictures offer "The Lone Star Ranger" and "Ladies of Leisure."

The midnight show comes on Friday night.

WHOLE WEEK SET FOR JOY

Every member of the theatrical profession, from executive to office boy, has answered the call for Players' and Patrons' Jubilee week in the theater, scheduled from April 4 to April 11.

In addition to the 55-star cast of "The Stolen Jools," the hilarious comedy which Hollywood contributes as its share toward the success of the celebration, names on the committee include George Arliss, Belle Baker, George Bancroft, Ethel Barrymore, Ben Bard, John Barrymore, Lionel Barrymore, Constance Bennett, Richard Bennett, Ben Blue, Irene Bordoni, Emil Boreo, Clara Bow, Fannie Brice, Francis X. Bushman, Jr., Eddie Cantor, Nancy Carroll, Lita Grey Chaplin, Marguerite Churchill, Bernice Claire, Clark and McCullough, Clayton, Jackson and Durante, George P. Cohan, William Collier, Sr., Joyce Compton, Joe Cook, Phil Cook, Dolores Costello, Kitty Toner, Eddie Dowling, Morton Downey.

Others are Marie Dressler, Dr. Rockwell, Ruth Etting, Charles Farrell, Harry Fox, Trixie Friganza, Greta Garbo, Janet Gaynor, Charlotte Greenwood, William Haines, Ann Harding, Marilan Harris, Ted Healy, Bob Hope, Walter Huston, May Irwin, Elsie Janis, George Jessel, Al Jolson, Leatrice Joy and Helen Kane.

More than 2500 theaters from Maine to Texas and throughout Canada, will play "The Stolen Jools" Easter week, and film and vaudeville houses everywhere will join in the great show.

Gayety Theater

At the Gayety, under direction of E. M. Loew, the two feature photoplays for tomorrow are "Jaws of Hell" with Cyril MacLaglen and "College Lovers" with Jack Whiting and Marion Nixon. Some of the acts are Mane Cornelli & Co., Deighan and Ball, the three radio songsters, Lang and Ross, and Leon and Brown.

AIR FRAGRANT WITH PINE

The stage of Symphony Hall next Tuesday night is to be transformed into a typical Maine living room for the first Boston stage appearance of Seth Parker, Jones, Maine rural philosopher and humorist of the air.

Seth Parker

There will be an exact reproduction of an early Colonial fireplace. An antique rocker will be placed aside of it. And Seth, in his rural makeup and gentle drawl, will say:

"Would yer start us off Ma?" and then clearing his throat and rapping on the hymn book for attention, will add:

"Now, folks, mind yer forties'mos and yer pianies'mos"—and the program will have begun. Seth, who in real life is Philip B. Lord, will also sing hymns of his own composition.

Special Musicale Will Precede Film Showing

As an added attraction of the program at the Fine Arts during the Sunday afternoon performance, the management announces that the Jenar Hansen String Quartet will present a program of music. This group of sterling musicians is from the ranks of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and includes besides Mr. Hansen, Stanley Benson, Hans Werner and Carl Barth. At the piano for this concert will be Madame Shari de Lys.

Ben Lyon Featured in Film at Twin Houses

Ben Lyon, who has one of the featured roles in "The Hot Heiress," now playing at the Beacon and Modern, is a Southerner, having been born and reared in Atlanta, Ga. He was educated at Park school in Atlanta and at the City College in Baltimore.

Some of his pictures are "So Big," "Flaming Youth," "Air Legion," "Bluebeard's Seven Wives," "Hell's Angels" and "My Past."

WIZARD LENS HUNTS THE MONGOLS

"Storm Over Asia," now at the Fine Arts, is an excellent example of motion picture technique. It tells its story in lights and shadows, and that it is so, is tribute to the genius of Vsevold Pudovkin, one of the greatest Russian directors. He uses his camera with magic effect so that one does not miss dialogue; at the same time the organization is stimulated to high degree. This master of the movies is less than 38 years of age, with 11 years of experience in films, following a career as a painter, lasting through six years. In 1921 as pupil and assistant of V. R. Gardin, he took part in developing of the scenario and in production of the film "Shields and Hammer," and in 1922 produced with Gardin the film "Hunger, Hunger, Hunger."

One big production of his was "Mother," from Maxim Gorki's novel. Then came his "The End of St. Petersburg" and "Storm Over Asia."

Vsevold Pudovkin

Bowdoin Square

There will be an entire new picture and selected vaudeville bill at the Bowdoin Square, beginning tomorrow for the first half of the week. "Body and Soul" is the talking feature.

Another picture is "Fair Warning." Cabaret night comes on Wednesday with extra acts.

PROGRAM FOR SYMPHONY

The twenty-first pair of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will take place in Symphony Hall next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. Dr. Serge Koussevitzky will than give the first performances of the Konzertmusik which Paul Hindemith has written especially for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in its 50th season. This score which the German composer composed last December is written for strings and brass instruments. The program will otherwise consist of Debussy's "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun."

ALL FOR SAKE OF FUN ON SCREEN

El Brendel breezes along over the screens of the Uptown and Olympia, his laughter vehicle being "Mr. Lemon of Orange," in which he has the peppy support of Fifi Dorsay. Brendel essays a "dual" role, and proves that he is able to enact a "straight" part as well as his customary Swedish dialect performance. He is first and foremost the inoffensive "Mr. Lemon," a toy salesman. Through no fault of his own he is fired. Stumbling homeward, he walks right into the middle of a battle between rival gangsters over a truckload of liquor. And there the fun starts.

"Mr. Lemon" bears a remarkable resemblance to "Silent McGee," gangster chieftain, and is mistaken for the plug ugly by friend as well as foe. Miss Dorsay, whose brother has been killed in the melee, invites the supposed "McGee" to her night club where she sings.

Once there, she tries first to wrest information from him regarding the hijacked liquor truck, and later seeks to "put him on the spot." How he finally outwits both sets of gangsters and wins the affection of Miss Dorsay provides further hilarity.

Miss Dorsay is good in her characterization of the night club singer. William Collier, Sr., does an unusually fine job in the role of Brendel's irascible brother-in-law, and adds much to the comedy when he starts in to beat up the hard-boiled "McGee" on the supposition that it is "Mr. Lemon."

John Charles Thomas

John Charles Thomas is to make a single visit to Boston this season to give a recital in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, April 12.

TIED TO MOUTH OF CANNON ON STAGE

More than usual interest attaches to the engagement of Blackstone, the magician, at the Scollay, starting Monday. His entourage numbers a score or more, assistant porterers, while a 70-foot baggage car is required to transport the paraphernalia and livestock. The Blackstone program is marked for its novelty as well as the skill of the master artist himself. "Blown Into Eternity" is described as being of the last word in mystery. At the time of the Sepoy mutiny in India the British are reputed to have punished spies by tying them to mouths of cannon. On this Blackstone conceived his number. Blackstone's escape provides as many ideas as to how-dozs-he-do-it as a centipede has legs.

Blackstone

Blackstone crowds no less than 50 different tricks and illusions into the span of his performance.

Vera Reynolds Is Star of Photoplay at Park

A triple bill of the Park is headed by "The Last Dance," with Vera Reynolds and Jason Robards. The second feature is Tom Tyler in "West of Cheyenne." The third feature is chapter four of the secret service thriller series, "Finger Prints," under the title of "The Sinister Shadow," in which Kenneth Harlan is featured with Edna Murphy.

SEEK POSTER FOR 'POPS'

The art students of Boston are in keen competition to take the first prize in a contest for the design of the poster to be used in the coming Pops season at Symphony Hall which opens in May. The conditions of the award are known to every art school in Boston. There are to be three prizes. The prize-winning poster, if suitable, will be used by the Symphony Hall management to make known the 46th season of the Pops.

SOUNDS TAPS JAZZILY ON HIS DRUM

The genial Negro genius of jazz, Eddie Dean, is doubling this week at the RKO Keith-Boston where he is one of the features of the special pre-Easter program arranged for that house.

Before coming to Boston Dean and his "noise hounds" had rhythmically moaned their way into the tapping shoes and fast-beating hearts of half New York when he played at Connie's Inn in that city, just as he played his way into favor at the Venetian Gardens, Chicago, and the Club Alabam' in Philadelphia.

Eddie brings with him to the Keith-Boston the ebony hued exponent of the best in tap dancing, "Slappy" Wallace, formerly identified with Ted Lewis and the musical show "Hot Rhythm, whose broad grin, shiny mahog any countenance and rolling black eyes are familiar to many Bostonians, and Al Brantley, the fast-stepping, sweet-singing youngster, one of the original "Blackbirds" brought to fame by Lew Leslie.

John Galsworthy

John Galsworthy, who has not lectured in America for several years, is shortly to make a visit to this country. He will make a single appearance in New England. He will speak in Symphony Hall on Wednesday evening, April 8. The novelist announces as his subject: "Literature and Life."

Roland Hayes

Roland Hayes, returning shortly from the West, will end his seventh tour of America with a recital in Symphony Hall. He will appear there on Thursday evening, April 23.

"School-Day Idleness Leads Youth to Social Rebellion,"

says Kathleen Norris

"This is because we keep neither the minds nor the bodies of our boys and girls busy. They get a smattering of everything at high school and a knowledge of nothing." Mrs. Norris advocates boys and girls of fourteen choosing a life work. Technical training in store keeping, medicine, buying or selling can be acquired in the morning hours. Work in the afternoon on some real job would teach the value of money, she believes.

"Mahatma Gandhi's Creed Is True Freedom Philosophy,"

says Rupert Hughes

"That precious right—the right to err," are the words of Mahatma Gandhi, who of all living men has most conformed to ancient ideas of saintliness and has become a giant of power by non-resistance. "Fanaticism turns moral zeal into cruel wrong doing, and corroption follows tyranny," says Mr. Hughes.

N. J. DIVORCE LAW LOOKS FOR MICKEY WALKER K. O.

Mickey Walker and Wife No. 1.

Wife No. 2 says "Watch your nose"

New Mrs. Walker and Mickey in kitchen scene

Does Edward Parker Walker, whom you know as "Mickey" Walker, the middleweight boxing champion, have two wives? That is according to the divorce laws of New Jersey. Some say he has. "Mickey" says he's not annoyed as his lawyer told him it was O. K. to take a second wife when he did. The first Walker marriage was severed by divorce signatures on February 14. Ninety days must elapse before divorce is effective. If this law stands then "Mickey" must explain, but Walker took for his second wife, Miss Clara Helmers, at Hempstead, L. I., having in mind that 90 days meant from time divorce was recommended—that being in December of last year. The investigation is on. You see Mickey and Wife No. 1 in top pictures and below two poses with his new bride. (International Newsreel.)

Travers' Act Makes Mary Wonder

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Mary Lou Thurston, a beautiful and vivacious girl of the "home" type, orphaned by the death of her parents, lives with her aunt and uncle, Clara and Howard Sanderson. The former is private secretary to a publisher, and the latter an engineer. Larry Mitchell, energetic young newspaper reporter, is Mary Lou's pal. Sanderson gets a wonderful business chance to go to the Orient and take his wife as secretary. Mary Lou is to stay temporarily with Grandma Jennings, Clara's mother. Larry is eager to marry Mary Lou and take care of her, but Mary Lou convinces him they are merely good pals and asks him to help her get a job. She applies at the Lorrimer's and is claimed by the son of the house as his war bride, named "Delight."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

By FAITH BALDWIN

Author of "The Office Wife," "Alimony" and Other Famous Serials.

PETER indicated the chaise-longue, the comfortable, deep chairs . . . the many books, scattered on small tables, and housed in built-in bookcases, the silver and enamel boxes of cigarettes. "If you'd take a chair, miss," he suggested, "and make yourself at home."

Mary Lou reached up mechanically to take off her hat. Her head ached. But then she remembered that the hat lay on the floor where Lorrimer had cast it. She remembered that her coat was downstairs and her pocketbook. There was nothing to do but wait.

In the Boudoir

Peter went out and closed the door very softly behind him. Mary Lou stared around her, unseeingly at first, and then gradually absorbing the really exquisite surroundings in which she so amazingly found herself.

"I suppose it's what they call a boudoir," remarked Mary Lou to herself with a half giggle, her courage, color and spirits beginning to return.

"I've read about 'em and I can pronounce 'em," she informed herself further, "but it's the first time I've ever come in contact with one of 'em!"

There was nothing lacy or overcrowded, perfumed or bedecked about the room. It was simply a comfortable lived-in sort of place, restrained and beautiful in coloring and appointments and filled with books, old and new, shabby and fresh.

Over by one corner of the bookcase, near the great double windows which looked out over the lawns and had for its pleasure a silver glimpse of Sound as well, Mary Lou lifted her eager, book-loving eyes from the rows upon rows of volumes and looked straight into equally eager, laughing eyes which looked do n on her from a photograph framed in heavy, dull silver.

Slight Shock

For a moment Mary Lou stared, conscious of a slight shock. She knew those eyes, she thought, and the face . . . a lean, laughing face under the jaunty cap of the Royal Flying Corps. She knew, too, she thought, the tall broad-shouldered uniformed figure, sitting very negligently on some excellent photographer's bench. Knew and yet did not know. And it was a full minute before it dawned on her that here was Travers Lorrimer, the man downstairs, the man who had exposed Peter to so frightening and inexplicable a scene, a scene of which she was trying hard not to think.

Lorrimer as he had been, Lorrimer very young, Lorrimer in early 1915, so many years ago, Lorrimer just turned 18 years of age, a laughing, delightful boy.

Her heart hurt her with pity. Half unconsciously she reached up and carefully lifted down the big heavy frame and went to the couch and sat down, still hold-

Happy Society Children Find Public Garden a Cheerful Play Spot

MARY BATCHELDER

NANCY BEEBE

Spring is here. Warm weather is promised, so that society children who spend a lot of time in play at the Public Garden can toss off that heavy coat and have a real good time. Seated at the bottom of a monument, the photographer caught Mary Brown Batchelder, 6 Mt. Vernon st., Back Bay, and Nancy Beebe, of 20 Embankment rd., Back Bay, in conversation. Nancy was the custodian of a large beach ball. Patsy Heidt came all the way from San Francisco to feed the squirrels. She, with her family, are guests of Beacon Hill society folk. (Staff photos.)

CLINTON DIES SUDDENLY

DeWitt Clinton, 59, prominent official of the New England Gas & Electric Association and former city treasurer of Worcester, died suddenly at his home, 159 Larchwood drive, Cambridge, at 2:30 a. m. today.

He had been slightly indisposed for about a week but his illness was not considered serious.

Mr. Clinton had been a resident of Worcester until recently when he was transferred to this section. He was treasurer of the Worcester Gas Light Company and when that concern was purchased by the New England Association he was elected to a similar office in the association.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ada Wright Clinton, and two children, Mary and DeWitt Clinton, Jr.

WILBAR CHARGE BRINGS PROBE

Brockton, March 28—In a conference today with Dist. Atty. Winfield M. Wilbar of Plymouth county, Mayor Harold D. Bent and City Marshal Herbert Boyden promised an immediate and exhaustive investigation of the alleged inefficiency of the police department, blamed by Wilbar yesterday when he not prossed cases against two murder suspects.

"We will immediately institute an investigation along the lines suggested by the district attorney. We are as much interested as anyone in placing the blame where it belongs," said the mayor after the conference.

Dist. Atty. Wilbar's attack on police methods came after he declared that evidence against John Tevlin and William A. Callahan, held for the murder of Benjamin Khoury, had been so mishandled by officers detailed to the case that it had no value.

Lenten Prayer

A Business Risk

(Read Luke XIX., 11-26. Text, Luke, XIX., 26.) Unto every one which hath shall be given; and from him that hath not, even that which he hath shall be taken away from him.

The men who made such large returns on the money intrusted to them must have taken great risks. The fault of the third man was that he was prudent, cautious, afraid to take risks. The teaching of the parable is that we must use or we will lose. But to use is to take chances of losing. To use our religion in the practical affairs of life is to risk it. Our treasure of faith is put to hazard when we take it out into the markets of life There are many who think it is in danger from the science of our day. What then? Shall we keep our religion separate and apart from business? Shall we shield our faith from contacts with the teachings of science? Those who counsel these things indorse the conduct of the man who laid his pound away in a napkin. Faith must face every challenge.

PRAYER: Lord of the seas, grant unto us courage to launch out into the deep. Let not any fear possess our souls, who have put our trust in thee. Amen.

For a good piece of real estate, buy it wisely, pay for it, keep it, and later it will keep you. See the sound values listed today in the real estate columns of the Classified Ads.

Dorchester Couple Rescued by Daughter

Fire in the tenement house at 14 Gleason st., Dorchester, drove five persons into the street last night and did damage of $7000. The cause of the fire is unknown.

Those driven out were Mr. and Mrs. Rubin Fivorinsky, their 23-year-old daughter, Rose, Sophie Papkin, 16, and Eliot Waldman, 3. Miss Fivorinsky guided her father and mother down through the smoke-filled hallway to the street.

Other Heroine of Blaze in Dorchester Rouses Parents and Rescues Them

Two girls, one 23 and the other 15, found themselves heroines today after a fire of undetermined origin had swept through a 2½ story wooden dwelling in Gleason st., Dorchester, causing damage estimated at $6500.

Rose Fiborinsky, 23, was awakened by the blaze and after arousing her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Fiborinsky, led them from the second floor to safety.

The first floor is occupied by Isadore Flaschner, who was away at the time with relatives, who are visiting his home. His three-year-old daughter, Elaine, was carried to the street by her older sister, Beatrice, 15.

When flames raced through the home of Isadore Flaschner, in Gleason st., Dorchester, last night, Beatrice Flaschner, 15, above, carried her sister, Elaine, 3, to the street and safety. (Staff photo.)

TWO CHILDREN SAVED IN FIRE

Inspector Thomas H. Lexry of the Cambridge police groped through a smoke-filled house early today to rescue Edward, 2, and John, 4, sons of Mr. and Mrs. John Dempsey of 15 High st., Cambridge, as fire, starting in the cellar of their home, spread through the house, causing damage of $300.

Inspector Leary, who lives opposite the Dempsey home, was aroused by the cries of the children. He rushed into the house and carried them out of the burning building and into his own home. The parents followed unaided.

Truck Ties Up Traffic

Traffic on the Elevated tracks in Dorchester was near Columbia rd., for 20 minutes today when a grocery truck broke an axle and dropped part of its load to the pavement.

HIGH-PRESSURE SALESMAN HAS HAD HIS DAY

Speaker Tells Managers' Club How Their Business Must Be Built Up

The day of the "go-getter" salesman is over. In his place will come a salesman, who, instead of trying to outwit his customer, will learn his customer's needs, and supply them without rushing the prospect off his feet in an attempt to book a larger order than consistent with the welfare of the buyer.

This theory was advanced today at a Luncheon of the Sales Managers' Club and the Executives' Club of the Boston Chamber of Commerce by Leon P. Dutch, sales consultant of Dorr Corbett & Dutch.

POLICIES TOSSED ASIDE

"During the past year and a half," he said, "a number of manufacturers have thrown sound policies and ethical practices to the winds in their mad scramble to get orders at any cost.

"Some firms whose salesmen have for years been selling and serving their customers in a constructive business-building and customer-holding manner, have tuned up their sales force with a so-called 'go-getter' sales manager."

DEPEND ON "PEP" MEETINGS

These men, Dutch said, have in many cases no actual experience in contacting customers, but depend for their success on pep meetings, pep and ginger letters and bulletins from some canned sales service.

He said:

"Should the heads of every manufacturing concern in New England follow the example of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales and spend the next six months on the road, visiting customers and prospective customers, New England's business would jump ahead by leaps and bounds.

"The heads of New England manufacturing concerns will have to get back to 'shirt-sleeve' methods, if they are to continue to satisfy their boards of directors and stockholders."

Another speaker was Harry F. Twomey of the Jordan Marsh Co., who declared that there is but one fundamental in selling—the other fellow's viewpoint.

Fast "Deal" Made by Slick Peddler

An itinerant oil-cloth salesman who visited the home of Mrs. Ruth Well, at 54 Tufts st., Arlington today left three yards of his salesproduct and took in return a $10 bill which lay on the mantel-piece.

When Mrs. Wells went to another room to get change for her purchase of oil-cloth she left the light-fingered visitor alone with the bill her husband had left for the coalman. She returned to see the stranger disappearing through the doorway.

Four False Alarms

Four false alarms were sounded by three men who toured the city in an automobile.

Hit-and-Run Driver Freed in Killing

Released yesterday after a two months' sentence in the House of Correction for leaving the scene of an accident without making known his identity, Donato Audette was freed on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the same accident today in Quincy district court.

Judge Avery ruled there was not sufficient evidence in the case to warrant holding Audette for the grand jury. According to testimony at the previous trial, Audette was the driver of a car which struck and killed Joseph McDonald in Quincy, Jan. 21.

The domestic help problem is solved by taking a kitchenette apartment and the best are advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

TEACHER RUNS OWN RADIO STATION

The only known woman amateur radio operator in Greater Boston, and one of the comparatively few in the country, lives in Cambridge, it was revealed in government reports today.

She is Miss Gladys L. Hannah, of 49 Lakeview ave., owner and operator of Station WIKY. Miss Hannah has had a radio operator's license since 1924 and is regarded as one of the best operators in amateur circles.

Last night she was found at work in the "radio shack," a portable house in the rear of her home, sending and receiving messages from other amateur operators.

The "shack" is equipped with a powerful 40-80 meter short wave radio with two antennae to receive and send messages.

"I have been in touch with amateur stations in Australia, New Zealand, England, Scotland and France and have received numerous cards from operators of other countries for my acknowledging messages from my station," she said.

"During the Vermont flood several years ago I was in touch with operators of stations there and relayed messages to their relatives."

Miss Hannah is secretary of the Massachusetts Eastern Amateur Radio Association, a club composed of amateur operators around Greater Boston. Meetings are held twice a month in the "shack."

Radio is only a hobby with Miss Hannah, her occupation being a weaving instructor.

Japanese Ship Pact Saves $5,000,000

Tokyo, March 28 (AP)—The recent agreement between the Nippo Yusen Kaisha and the Osaka Shosen Kaisha, Japanese shipping concerns, to eliminate competition between themselves on parallel routes was said today by company officials to have proved a means of saving $5,000,000 a year. The agreement aims at elimination of competition by both concerns using the same dock facilities and purchasing departments.

Wife Off on Hunt for Missing Flier

Manila, March 28 (AP)—Mrs. Glenn W. Brophy, wife of the Los Angeles aviator who disappeared March 20 while attempting a flight 600 miles across the China Sea from Macao to Manila, waited for Hong Kong today, Mrs. Brophy said she believed there was a chance that her husband had been picked up by a fishing boat and was still alive.

AT THE LISTENING POST

TONIGHT AND SUNDAY is all we have to look forward to and it is peculiarly significant that Sunday affords some extraordinary broadcasting in many studios. For example, the Fox Fur Trappers (WABC-WNAC at 6 p. m.) bring the voice of John Herrick, baritone, and Helen Barr, soprano, on a Columbia chain program. Such selections as "A Little Lane in England" and "Reaching for the Moon" by Earl Nelson, another feature of this period, give rise to the prediction that the offering will be well received.

CONCERNING the matter of changing our column name, we now resort to ADVERTISING—which is the greatest force there is to promote anything. Meaning that we have an important announcement to make and it is as follows:

ANNOUNCEMENT EXTRAORDINARY!
All suitable for the contest to change the name of this "col-yum" must be post-marked not later than Monday, March 30th, 1931, at midnight.
WINNER TO BE MADE KNOWN ON WEDNESDAY, APRIL 1st
(No Fooling!)
Hurry! Hurry! Hurry!

THE ABOVE MAY NOT be a good advertisement, but at least it serves due notice on Listening Posters. We shall see what we shall see.

Features on Air

COMING OUT OF THE ETHER . . . WBZA and WNAC will re-enact the third play-off hockey game between the Bruins and Les Canadiens tonight at 10:15 and a further report at 11:00 . . . "Dempsey," a white sled dog that was used by Admiral Byrd on his South Pole expedition will be heard on the Children's program from WEEI at 5 today. "Dinney" will be heard in the talking picture playlet, "An Exciting Journey." . . . Tomorrow brings the most ambitious attempt ever made to acquaint listeners with grand opera when Deems Taylor, American author-composer, presents an opera appreciation course in anticipation of future radio development. The program will be heard over WEEI at 2. For his first b'dcast Taylor will trace, with appropriate musical illustrations, the growth and development of musico-dramatic entertainment.

A fe and two fi-s for the WEEI at 11:15 b'dcast of tonight. Radio will bound forward with a bang at this hour when Graham McNamee reports the classic struggle for American supremacy on the ping pong field—or is it table? A corps of 400 will be at the Hotel Pennsylvania in N. Y. to vie for premier honors.

HOT AIR CHATTER . . . Maestro Ruffino Cimbalist stated that melodies of modern composers excel in many ways the works of the old masters. . . . Chevalier only does three numbers an hour for his Sunday network program. He is a consistent local listener who can't get him. . . . John Charles Thomas, baritone on WEEI at 9:15 tomorrow evening, will broadcast his singfests for battles on the field of war. That wouldn't chime with the Malthus (or was it Gresham?) theory. . . . The technique of a bad musician requires three times as long to learn, and three times as much rehearsal, as "straight" playing, says Harry Salter, who leads the Real Folks band. Sour notes, he adds, are so carefully scored as to . . . Beethoven composi-

Venice Under Cherry Blooms Capital Plan

Washington, March 28 (AP)—A little bit of Venice—with sound effects—will add a new touch to Washington's famous Japanese cherry blossom scene this year. Gasoline driven gondolas are looking imported from Florida. A rush order has been placed for three of them. They are expected to be placed in service on the Potomac Tidal Basin by cherry blossom time, which begins about April 1.

Workers Reject Shoe Wage Cut

Haverhill, March 28—The wage cut problem in the shoe industry here became further involved last night when another vote of the question of taking a 10 per cent reduction was rejected by members of the Shoe Workers' Protective Union, 518 to 172. Wednesday, the cut was accepted, 314 to 176.

A group of Boston Evening American newsboys in Indian garb as they appeared at the Boston American building in Winthrop sq. just before they marched to the National Theater in Tremont st. There they were guests of Manager L. W. Richmond at the thrilling picture, "The Indians Are Coming." They were also guests at a "big feed." (Staff photo.)

'NEWSIES' SEE NEW PICTURE

More than 1000 Boston Evening American newsboys paraded to be National Theater in Tremont at this morning to witness a special showing of a new serial, "The Indians Are Coming,' as guests of L. W. Richmond, manager of the theater.

Under the care of "Happy" Rubinovitch, the newsboy king, the happy youngsters left the American office escorted by mounted police and led by Chief Toms, noted Indian baritone and a real redskin, who is making personal appearances with the picture.

During the showing of the picture, Chief Toms explained scenes and entertained with a special program of Indian songs and dances.

Other attractions were James Oliver Curwood's "Rover's End," with Charles Bickford, and a special technicolor picture

After the performance refreshments were served to the "newsies" by arrangement of Manager Richmond with Frank Archer of Maxieland, the Waldorf Lunch System and H L. Hildreth Co manufacturers of 'Velvet Kiss-e-s'

SHIP LIGHTNING HIT LIMPS IN

The Norwegian freighter Dagali foremast shattered and decks strewn with evidences of a terrific struggle with the elements, limped into port today

As he surveyed the damage to his vessel Capt Jamvold told of the intensity of the electrical storm encountered off the Virginia Capes Wednesday night

"The wind and waves tossed her about like a chip, and it looked bad all the way to Highland Light," he said. "When the bolt struck the foremast it seemed the whole vessel was charged with electricity. It's a miracle that no one was injured."

The Dagali carried 18 000 bags of raw sugar from Sagua la Grande and Matanzas, Cuba

Germany Puts Ban on "Red" Outbreaks

Berlin, March 28 (AP)—President von Hindenburg today put a dictatorial foot down hard on political rowdyism and 'godless agitation' in Germany. # SAVED from a CANNIBAL FEAST

A YOUNG woman, now residing in Kansas City, trembles when she hears a kettle sing. To most of us a singing kettle is a thing of cheer—but to her it recalls a cannibal's kettle which was boiling for her—and almost got her.

This young woman was then living in the interior of Liberia. Her father was a medical missionary. In the absence of her parents on an errand of mercy, the blacks captured her and a colored servant girl. While the terrified girls watched, these cannibals brought an immense kettle, filled it with water and started a great fire under it. Finally the water was boiling and the blacks were bringing the white girl, half dead with terror, to the edge of the boiling pot. Just then . . .

But why tell it here?

It is told completely and vividly in next week's American Weekly, with a photograph of the young woman, her name and all the interesting details.

This is one of the true stories of real life, stranger than fiction, which help to make The American Weekly the most interesting magazine section in the world.

TODAY'S TRUE STORY

WHEN A GIRL LOVES

War Scar Healed

THE DAY Chick Mallory marched away with his company Babe Baldwin knew she'd made a mistake. Keith Cantrell, with all his own social graces wasn't going to be much consolation in the lonely days ahead, and Babe Baldwin knew it then and there.

Lots of water went over the dam before she saw him again, even at that. It takes lots of time, to get rushed through a training school for nurses, and still more to keep getting transfers into battle sectors where particular divisions are assigned.

Even when, after the first dressings, and in the four-day interim before corps hospital patients were evacuated to the base, she had barely more than five minutes with Chick Mallory alone. Just enough to tell him the secret that she'd carried in her own heart all through the war, and to see a glad sort of light come to his eyes when she asked him to promise to come direct to her, at Kensington, when the war was over and the two of them might begin to live normal lives again.

And after that 12 years.

This particular night a chill late winter wind swept down through the canyon that is Broadway, and across the field of ever swaying human grass that is Times Square. Something made Babe Baldwin stop as she moved, subway bound, from the Seventh ave. side, and watch for a moment or two the faces of the passing throng. And then she saw him.

"Chick," she called, and when he cast a hurried glance over his shoulder and fairly plunged down the subway kiosk, she forget everything else and rushed after him.

"Please," the girl urged him, and he finally took her arm in his and moved toward the stairs. He agreed when she motioned toward a cab and got in with her as she muttered the driver to "just head up town."

"Now," she told him, "you and I have got to talk."

"Nothing to talk about," the man told her, almost roughly. "I'm just one of those who didn't settle down, couldn't find himself, after the war. The war. The scar—he turned his head, collar down and in the garish light of a street corner lamp she saw the first time, a great red scar that went from the lobe of his right eye downward and backward toward the angle of his jaw—makes me look like a freak. It knocked me out of two or three jobs. I got so I didn't care. I looked like something to scare people. I knew how to handle guns. Well, you can guess the answer—"

"Just be fair," he growled at her, and fairly tossed himself into the other corner of the car. "How can I talk of love?" he asked. "Cops in five cities want to ask me about jobs here and there. My scar marks me from Portland to Portland and from Key West to San Diego. Where've I got it? It's just a question of time until there's a finger on my shoulder and some headquarters guy says, 'Come along.' That's my car. Can I love any woman with things that way? Can I do anything that puts what I am doing until I come to the end of my rope, to dangle by it?"

"Around the park," she said to the driver, and then turned again to the man in the car. "Listen," she began. "I loved you 13 years ago, enough to follow you to Paris, just to have the chance to tell you it was no affair you'd marched away. You told me when the war was all out of the way that you'd come back to me again. Instead, you left me hanging on a limb. Twelve years. I turned down every man I knew who ever asked me. Just waiting for you. And now you tell me a scar can stand between us—a scar and what that scar has come to mean. Listen, my boy, the war taught women something, too. Come here."

She pulled his head closer to her, and for five minutes or more she whispered in his ear.

Inspector Callaghan leaned over his desk. He pointed a finger at Chick Kensington knew as Chick Mallory.

"Fingerprints of twins sometimes are alike," he admitted. "You say the man we knew as Scarface Father was your twin brother. You point out that you have no scar such as he had. You tell me you've been working steadily for a year. I'll tell you frankly I'm going to keep on watching you. But I'll tell you just as frankly that as things stand now I've got nothing on you."

The girl beside Mallory looked the inspector straight in the eye.

"Then, inspector, if my husband and I don't get into trouble, we can just go ahead living out our lives together? If we're good, you'll give us both a break?"

He held out a hand. She shook it. So did Chick Mallory. As she turned to go, she took a card from a case and turned to the official.

"I'm sort of in business for myself, you know," she said. "Since we were married, Chick and I, I've been keeping right on with my work. It's awfully interesting."

She handed him the card. It read:

"Dr. Mabel Baldwin-Mallory—
Plastic Surgeon.
Faces lifted—scar-tissue removed—skin, bone and flesh adjustments."

She smiled. So, after a brief moment, did the inspector.

"When one is in trouble," he said, "it's always best to face it out."

DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley

MADE KIN by "Love," experienced, once by the stout lady with graying hair and eyes lighted by the blown-upon embers of romance, and now, by the nymph with youth written all over her enchanting person.

An Entente Cordiale—the ingenue with the love story just to be played, and the player who once was a slim little Juliet. The recruit, and the retired campaigner. The latter with a knowing heart For does it not remember scented nights, and Summer days, perfect moments—flawless moments when the whole world stood still and held its breath for a pair of young lovers? Laughter together, and foolish but intense conversation together—dialogue that was important only to them, and patter to the rest of the world.

The first kiss, the first night she slept with her new name—"Mrs." ring under her pinky cheek—like a star beneath a rose And could hardly go to sleep, for this wonderful thing that persisted in shining through the night. He had bought himself—and he was young and vain, too—cheap suits for a year that he might board up enough pelf to buy it! Then the chirping flock of girl-friends were told—and they marveled "Oh-hhh—divine! Isn't it divine, Bessie?" They do not say "divine" now, the key of girl-friends—but "Love" is much the same, first love, engagement days.

"My dear," sighs the stout lady, "I know all about it. And my heart is jumping up and down with joy and understanding. 'Simpatico,' we two!" My heart has sat up, and is lighting the candles of a long-ago love. My dear, I, too, have almost fainted at the sight of a certain figure coming down the street. I have ceased to breathe at the sight of the back of his head in a crowd. I have gotten a lump in my throat at the way HE wore his hat, and the angle of his eye-brows! He and 'Love' and I have waded a daisy-field with a lunch-basket! We have quarreled intensely, and made-up intensely. His hand holding mine was the strangest, and the most marvelous thing in the world. The whole thing—he, I and Love—was a miracle! A MIRACLE.

My dear, I haven't forgotten a thing "

And does the figure that lolls, entranced, on the back of the confiding seat, does he smile at the stout lady who turns up her eyes and says, "Ah-h l'amour! I, too, my dear!"

No; for to "Love" the stout lady is very young indeed compared to his own life. And he remembers her love-days as well as she does. He was there! He remembers her cheek-wrinkle as once a dimple. He remembers her quite sandy when she weighed one hundred and ten and had an eighteen-inch waist. She doesn't look so different to him, even now. To "LOVE." And he doesn't see a thing funny in it So he said to me!

Don't Become 'Sick With Fright'

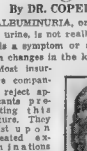
By DR. COPELAND.

ALBUMINURIA, or albumin in the urine, is not really a disease. It is a symptom or sign of certain changes in the kidney.



Dr. Copeland

Most insurance companies reject applicants presenting this picture. They insist upon repeated examinations until the urine has been cleared up. Then they accept the applicant.

Much alarm and concern are experienced in the meantime. We immediately picture ourselves in the grip of some terrible disease and flounder about hopelessly.

Stories of Bright's disease and other terrifying ailments come to our ears. We are almost sick from fear.

Well do I recall the story of a young man I had recommended for entrance at West Point. This boy was the very picture of perfect health. Not a symptom of any disease or incapacity had he ever experienced. He passed all his entrance examinations, including the physical examination, with high honors.

However, when it came to the usual routine urine examination, a trace of albumin was found. He was rejected on the grounds of physical unfitness. This boy suffered all the tortures of disease itself because of worry.

Albumin frequently appears during certain infectious diseases. This is the case in pneumonia and tonsilitis.

What I would like to impress upon you is that albumin does not mean kidney disease in every instance. However, it does warrant a complete physical examination by the doctor. He must check your heart, kidneys, lungs and general circulation. If these are all found to be satisfactory we need not worry about the presence of albumin.

There are many individuals who have albumin in their urine all their lives. These people have lived to a good old age without any trace at any time of kidney disease or associated bodily defects

I am telling you these things to reassure you. But please do not be too complacent about it. Be sure to see your doctor and let him examine you thoroughly to make sure all is as it should be ing the picture, looking at it intently, wondering about it.

For whom had he mistaken her? Someone named Delight? Odd name, pretty name, she liked it. Someone he had not seen in a long time. Someone he loved . . . and called . . . his wife. Who was she and where was she? Was she dead, were they trying to keep it from him, or had she deserted him? Where had he married her . . ." and when ?

She came back again and again to that incredible and breathless moment when she had been caught up in arms grown suddenly strong, when she had been held close to this stranger's heart, when she had felt his lips on her eyelids, on her face . . .

What was the explanation? Oh, she would have to wait and hear; she owed that to Mrs. Lorrimer! But she wanted to get away, somehow. She was still afraid, still very unsure of herself.

She put the picture down beside her and reached out for a magazine to distract her from her thoughts and ceaseless speculations. But, turning the pages, her eyes, fastened on picture or text, saw nothing, read nothing; the printed words made absolutely no sense. What would she do now? After she got back to Oakdale? How far away Oakdale seemed! Was it only this morning that had left there, eaten her hasty breakfast with Billy bouncing in his chair, with Adelaide complaining from her couch and Grace bustling in from the kitchen? Only this morning, too, that she had seen Larry and he had teased about her adventuring into the land of Those Seeking Employment? "Remember you are a direct descendant of Queen Cleopatra," he had said. Well, she hadn't been able to remember she was anyone's descendant, today's events had stripped her of family, relatives, friends and even actual existence, so forlorn and strange, so bewildered she had been!

Well, soon Mrs. Lorrimer would come and explain what there was to explain . . . not that it mattered, she thought, poor fellow, poor wife, unfortunate boys, but she'd wait and listen and then perhaps Mrs. Lorrimer would send her to the station and she would go back to New York and Oakdale. And tomorrow she would come into town again and present a letter written by Mrs. Lorrimer for her and perhaps something would come of it, perhaps she would get a position

There was a step in the hall. She stiffened. Was it Lorrimer? No, not Mrs. Lorrimer's step and Mrs. Lorrimer would not have knocked.

"Come in—"

It was Peter, with a tray, the smart maidservant following him.

"Luncheon, Miss Thurston," said Peter, "and Mrs. Lorrimer is still with Doctor Mathews and begs you to excuse her. She said she hoped you would find everything to your liking and she will join you here presently."

While Peter arranged the luncheon on a little dropleaf table which he drew out from the wall, the maid sat down pleasantly:

"I'm Hilda, Miss. Mrs. Lorrimer asked me to show you into her room in case you wished to brush your hair and wash . . . ?"

Feeling suddenly as if she had entered a fascinating fairy tale with its One-Eye, Two-Eye, Three-Eye, miraculously appearing luncheon tables and all, Mary Lou followed Hilda's becoming maroon uniform into the loveliest bedroom she had ever seen in her life and through that into a great bathroom, painted and decorated in mauve and green. There was a big dressing table there with many mirrors and rows of crystal bottles with jade stoppers and squat crystal jars filled with cold cream and cosmetics which looked quite good enough to eat.

Hilda produced heavy linen towels and ugly colored wash cloths, a powder jar and tuffs of ribbontied cotton and a brand new brush and comb in a little case and, after inquiring whether there was anything more she could do, withdrew.

Mary Lou washed her hands and face, combed her hair and powdered her pert little nose in a sort of dazed and lazy dream. Even the towels were too good to be true. Mrs. Lorrimer's eyes lingered long on the shining shower with its heavy glass door. She'd never seen one like it and was by now so "surrrendered to circumstances" that if Hilda had suddenly invited her to bathe in the pale green sunken tub or to stand under the needle-spray of the shower, she would probably have done so, without question.

She walked about and looked at the interesting walls, cool green and splashed with lavender in strange and unconventional flower designs. She had just about decided that it looked like a garden of iris when Hilda knocked at the door and announced luncheon. So Mary Lou went obediently out of the beautiful bathroom into the more beautiful bedroom and through to the sitting room, suddenly conscious that she was very hungry indeed.

Hilda had vanished. Peter hovered for a moment to see that the tea was strong enough and everything arranged for her comfort and then he too followed Hilda's example and left Mary Lou to gaze upon her tray with extreme pleasure and appetite.

A round of orange-bright melon; a slice of lime; a cup of steaming hot clear chicken broth; lots of brown bread, which she loved, cut thin, for Peter liked it; Melba toast as well, fresh buttered; a lamb chop; a baked potato, taken out of its shell and whipped with cream and put back again, and new green peas in milk; tea, with lemon and with cream; and a funny little fruit dessert, all fluff and sweetness such as girls love

She ate with her eyes as well as her red mouth "Je linen was lovely, the crystal and silver perfect, the luncheon service, in tones of brown and yellow, like an autumnal scene, the prettiest she ever had seen. An she was almost reluctant to ring for Peter at last as he had asked her to do, and see him appear and carry the remains away while Hilda deft and silent, set the table back against the wall again.

But Hilda had not been gone very long when Mrs. Lorrimer appeared.

She went right to the couch and sat down beside Mary Lou, who, replete and comforted, was again attempting to read the magazine as her hostess entered And so, sitting beside her, Mrs. Lorrimer took the girl's two hands in her own and tried to smile.

Miss Fairfax Tells Girl to 'Show Him'

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

For some time I've been in love with a young man who never seems to pay attention to me. Someone told him I liked him an awful lot and then he began paying me marked attention. That is, I'd see him once or twice a week and he'd kiss me and make love to me, but he never took me out with him, and once when he met me at a dance he didn't dance with me till the very end, and I noticed him signaling to another boy in a mirror to "cut in." It hurt my feelings very much. I suppose I'm what is called a pure little girl. Would you bother about him any more? DISILLUSIONED.

Dear Disillusioned: In your place I'd certainly bother. That young man must be was a no-timer as far as I was concerned. He was only was flattered, he couldn't resist making love to you when he heard you admired him, but he didn't consider you enough to treat you courteously at a dance, but signaled to another boy to crudely hand you over him. This will also answer a correspondent who signs herself Maude

Freckles Bother Her

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

A little while ago I read a very kind letter of yours to a sensitive girl whose life was made miserable by freckles and I wondered at the time if she wouldn't profit by my experience with those same pesky things. I was a young miss much interested in the little garden that our new suburban home boasted and I spent a great deal of time there digging, planting, weeding, etc. This was fine for my health but it ruined my hands, and when I played on the piano Husband and I were ashamed of my terribly freckled paws. Grandma told me to keep a cut lemon handy and rub it on after I washed dishes, worked in the garden, and cleaned house and to wear big, loose gloves as much as possible. My hands are lovely now if I do say it, and I do all of my own work, too. MRS M. J. K.

Dear Mrs. M. J. K.: Many thanks for your kind letter and I hope my correspondents who are fortunate enough to have little gardens will try the loose glove treatment I can vouch for it from personal experience because I too love to raise flowers and work in a garden. A good capable hand, pleasant to touch, has helped many a girl to the best life has to offer. Do you remember what Shakespeare said "The hand that hath made you fair hath made you good."

Butterfly Party for Easter

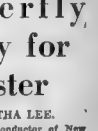
By MARTHA LEE.

Organizer and Conductor of New England's Largest Homemakers' Club of Over 37,000

IT'S BUNNIES and eggs, Easter lilies and Easter togs again, for April 5 is already showing up on the calendar. And since this is the season when we all emerge from our winter cocoons and begin to flit about, why not open the social season with an Easter butterfly party? Your house is perhaps already in its spring — time dress, your bulbs are beginning to bloom in joyous mood, and you may add to the spring-like spirit by adding sprays of real blossoms, real or artificial, to your decorations.



Martha Lee

The color-scheme may be that of the butterfly, which includes a bewildering assortment of delicate shades, with here and there a touch of deep gold and black. Narrow streamers of blue, pink, violet and yellow crepe-paper may be draped from the four corners of the room to the center light. The light, itself, may be covered with a soft, graceful fringe of pink crepe-paper banded at the top with a butterfly border

If your entertainment is to be cards, make tallies of violet or yellow mounting-board cut into the shape of butterflies, outline color and tie with narrow black satin ribbon. The prizes may be dainty handkerchiefs gathered into the shape of butterflies, using a slender vial of perfume for the body of the butterfly

Your refreshments, of course, should be as daintily and colorful as your decorations—and they must taste very spring-like and delectable. Here is a menu that is simple to prepare—the tested recipe is designed to serve eight persons.

MENU
Butterfly Salad
Toasted Buttered Crackers
Stuffed Olives
Peach Ice Box Cake
Coffee Salted Nuts

BUTTERFLY SALAD

Cut Hawaiian sliced pineapple in halves and place the two halves reversed on a salad plate garnished with crisp lettuce hearts, so that the halves form the wings of the butterfly. Mold cream cheese to which butter-coloring and cayenne pepper have been added, into a slender pointed roll to form the body of the butterfly. A very small stuffed olive may be used for the head. Garnish with mayonnaise.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

Cut Reflects Better Coal Management

Industry Long Bungled by Its Rulers; Prosser's Associates

By B. C. FORBES

New York, March 28—Announcement of a reduction in the price of anthracite far beyond the change usually made on April 1 to encourage summer ordering is welcome news. It is, perhaps, significant news, also.

B. C. Forbes

Many readers of this column have complained that, although practically everything else has come down in price, coal has stayed up. This fact has not helped to regain goodwill for coal leaders or corporations. No basic American industry has been worse mismanaged for a generation than the coal industry. This attitude was aptly reflected by "Divine Right Baer," then head of Reading; his idea was that he and other coal barons had been commissioned by God to occupy the exalted positions they occupied.

Fortunately, within the last few years high-handed autocracy has been losing its grip. Reorganization of the management has been effected by most coal companies. Men more in sympathy with modern conditions, men having a better understanding of the power of public opinion, have displaced the hard-boiled, short-sighted, old-time blunderers. Instead of the country being periodically plunged into chaos through bloody coal strikes, a greater measure of statesmanship in handling coal miners may be expected hereafter.

In addition to the substantial reduction by coal producers there is talk of lowering freight rates for the benefit of consumers.

Past bungling brought the coal industry to an unfortunate condition. Whereas most other industries grasped the importance of instituting elaborate methods with a view of improving processes and discovering new outlets the coal autocrats exercised no such vision. Consequently, coal has suffered from various kinds of competition and is threatened with still keener competition in the future.

It behooves the industry, therefore, not to charge as high prices as it can get away with, but to charge as low prices as are feasible.

The new cut is substantial enough to suggest that the anthracite producers are beginning to think and see more clearly and foresightedly.

'Tis funny how some men's fortunes are linked through life.

A leader arises, he associates with himself promising fellows and as the leader mounts he takes his colleagues along with him. The career of Seward Prosser, able and genial head of the Bankers Trust Co., New York, is an illustration perhaps unique.

Mr. Prosser and Thomas Cochran became vice-presidents of the modest Astor Trust Company in 1907. When Mr. Prosser became president of the Liberty National Bank in 1912, he chose as his assistant Harvey B. Gibson. Henry J. Cochran then was vice-president of the Astor Trust.

When Mr. Prosser became president of the Bankers Trust in 1914, Thomas Cochran succeeded him as president of the Liberty. In 1917, Henry Cochran became vice-president of the Bankers, and, two years ago, became president, Mr. Prosser meanwhile having become chairman. In 1914, too, Mr. Gibson followed Thomas Cochran as president of the Liberty, Mr. Cochran having then been made a partner of J. P. Morgan & Co.

Thus of Mr. Prosser's early associates who followed him in various positions one is now a Morgan partner, another is president of Mr. Prosser's own institution, and the third (Mr. Gibson) recently took over control of the Manufacturers Trust Company.

Mr. Prosser himself, when a young man, was spotted and sponsored by the late Henry P. Davison, the brainiest banker New York produced in my time. Among others fostered by Harry Davison were Dwight W. Morrow and Thomas W. Lamont, the former now United States Senator and the latter the principal partner of the present Mr. Morgan.

Mr. Lamont sailed last evening with Mrs. Lamont, for Greece. "It is purely a pleasure trip—not business," he emphasized to me, because I have often told him he was killing himself with overwork.

Not a few big men get far less out of life than those of us who carry fewer responsibilities.

RAIL SECURITY HOLDERS ARE 1,800,000

By FRANK H. MELOON

Some idea of the wide extent of interest in the railroad securities market is afforded by the fact that there are today about a million railroad bondholders in the United States and about 800,000 railroad stockholders. In addition to these, statistical services estimate that about 26,000,000 persons, one-sixth of our total population are directly or indirectly dependent upon the carriers for their livelihood.

David M. Collins

Our readers will recall that under the official Interstate Commerce Commission's tentative plan the Boston & Maine was allocated to the Loree railroad group. Disposition of the B. & M., if any, however, remains unsettled at this time.

Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers blazes a new financial trail by securing an option on a motor company's stock, in return for which it will boost the sales of the company's cars within its membership. The Brotherhood presumably hopes to be able as a result, to exercise the option and dispose of the stock at a profit.

If the move proves successful, we may see other organizations adopting it. The way is open for example, for the Grange, largest secret society in the country to make a profitable connection with General Motors, providing an agreement could be reached. But the outcome of the Brotherhood's project will doubtless be awaited before it is tried by others.

Enterprising Boston & Maine management, which has repeatedly blazed the trail for other carriers, is to offer another departure in railroad passenger transportation, first of its kind in the United States, next month when it starts popular-priced Pullman sleeping car excursions. Excursion trains of Pullmans which passengers may also use as a hotel in an overnight stop in Montreal, will be operated from the North Station April 18. Rates, including three nights' use of the sleeping cars, will be less than one-half the usual fare in sleepers.

Grigsby Grunow Co. reports today that for the first time this year orders are running ahead of production. The company is 22,000 sets behind in its shipments as of March 28, Don M. Compton of the company tells us, and is shipping 5000 sets today and tomorrow to fill rush orders.

"It has been impossible for us to accumulate the working inventory of new sets throughout the country which is necessary to enable us to provide our dealers with enough sets to secure immediate installation," says Mr. Compton.

Grains Are Easier in Chicago Market

Chicago, March 28—Grains closed easier today. Wheat was ¼c up to 2c down, corn ⅞ to ⅛c off and oats ⅛c higher to ¼c lower. Final prices for rye were ⅛ to ⅞c down.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Auburn Auto was the outstanding downside performer on the New York Stock Exchange today. The issue, a sensational traveler, broke about 14 points.

In an official statement today the N. Y. State attorney general's office said its investigation disclosed nothing which would warrant any intervention by the authorities.

Steel Operations' Drop Is a Factor

Estimate of a decline in steel operations for next week was a powerful market factor today. United States Steel closed at 141½, a loss of 1⅞ points for the two-hour session, and of 6 points from last Saturday. Bethlehem finished off nearly 2 points.

Jersey Standard Is at Year's Low

Standard Oil of New Jersey, closed at 43¼, the lowest price of the year, a loss of half a point.

Offerings Heaviest in the Last Hour

Heaviest outpouring of stocks took place in the final period today, setting the new tickets back about nine minutes in reporting sales from the floor of the stock exchange. Dow Jones averages showed a loss of 3½ points for the industrial averages and the neglected rails a fractional decline.

Industrial Alcohol Dividend Worries

Expected price war in the commercial alcohol field is breaking out and will enhance worry as to Industrial Alcohol's dividend action scheduled for next Thursday.

Radio Depends on the Market

Setback in Radio common emphasis that its sponsors require a strong performance by the general list in order to make any headway on the upside. The stock lacks the background of earnings.

Machine & Foundry Stock Absorbed

Recent weakness in American Machine & Foundry is ascribed to unexpected encountering in the market of a large block of stock. Its sponsors, however, have just purchased privately a very substantial amount of the stock.

National Surety Asset Position

Demand for National Surety stock has been attracted by recognition of the fact that its liquidating value at the close of 1930 equaled $95 a share.

STOCKS LOWER IN BOSTON DEALINGS

Stock prices reflected liquidation on the "big board" in today's dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange. Losses ranged from fractions to 2 points or more with all groups suffering alike.

Edison lowered a point to close the short session at 255 after selling at 254 earlier in the day. Stone & Webster and United Fruit each dropped 1⅞.

Boston Elevated shares were firm with the second preferred closing at 87¼, 1¼ above the previous closing level.

Point losses were recorded for General Capital and Eastern Gas & Fuel. Nash Motors dropped 1⅞ to 36. American Telephone sagged nearly 2 points to 191½ and Bigelow Sanford preferred dipped 1½ to 80.

Textile shares were firm, with Amoskeag showing a fractional gain.

Pawtucket, R. I., awarded to Second National Bank of Boston at 2.20 per cent, plus $1.50 premium, $150,000 loan due Oct. 27. Other bidders were: W. O. Gray & Co., 2.38 per cent; First National-Old Colony Corp., 2.32 per cent, and Rhode Island Hospital Trust, 2.48 per cent.

Swampscott awarded to Atlantic Corp. at 104.79, $50,000 4 per cent sewer notes dated April 1, and payable 1932 to 1956. Other bidders were: Sagamore Trust Co., 103.059 R. L. Day & Co., 103.059, and Estabrook & Co., 102.40.

Wenham awarded to Shawmut Corp. at 2.28 per cent $20,000 loan due Dec. 1.

STOCKS LOWER IN WEEK-END SELLING

New York, March 28—Stock leaders were generally lower in fresh selling on the New York Stock Exchange today. Operators for the decline were aided by less encouraging reports from the steel industry.

The downward momentum gained in the bear drives late yesterday was maintained in larger scale selling, the turnover for the two-hour trading period approximating about 2,000,000 shares.

LEADERS ARE DOWN

Losses of a point or more embraced most of the list while several important issues dropped 2 to 3 points, including American Can, American Telephone General Motors, Bethlehem Steel Electric Power & Light, North American, Johns Manville, Allied Chemical and American Water Works.

The utilities were heavily sold, Consolidated Gas dropping 4 points. The decline in General Motors carried Du Pont off 4, and Worthington Pump, Foster Wheeler and Vanadium lost as much.

Auburn Auto fell back over 13. As U. S. Steel, Radio, Radio Keith and Commonwealth Electric lost a point or more. Rails were neglected.

The week-end estimate of next week's steel mill operations in the Youngstown area indicating a reduction from 51 to 48 per cent of capacity helped the bear cause. An unexpected slump in orders for automobile sheets was said to have caused a curtailment of operations by some of the smaller makers.

COPPER IS HEAVY

Furthermore, Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors, was quoted as expressing a very conservative attitude toward business prospects. He looked for good business in 1932 and 1933, but felt that it would be a hard pull this year.

In the budget of adverse news, also, was further heaviness in copper metal. Considerable speculative metal was said to have been sold at 8¾ cents a pound off ⅛ of a cent, and only ¼ above the low of present century touched last fall. Silver, however, pushed up ⅛ of a cent an ounce to 29¼ cents.

The weekly trade reports were mildly cheerful, pointing out that the approach of Easter had brought the best week in retail trade so far this year.

Next Wednesday, April 1, will be the first big dividend payment date of the year, and estimates of total payments are around $500,000,000. This is expected to help the bond market, and may bring some investment buying into stocks.

Chapman Valve $2 on Old Stock Only

Chapman Valve Manufacturing Co. declared regular quarterly dividend of $2 a share on common stock payable April 1 to stock of record March 25. This dividend applies only on the old stock. Stockholders on February 4 approved a 4-for-1 split up of the common but the new stock will not actually be issued until April 1, thus initial dividend on the $25 par common would not be scheduled for payment until July 1.

Advertising to Aid Sales of Carpets

Washington, March 28—Widespread advertising and publicity campaign to increase the use of carpets in the home market is now being carried on by the $12,000,000 French carpet industry and closer co-operations between manufacturers and distributors is being urged by trade leaders, say advices from Vice Consul Richard W. Morin at Paris, made public by the Commerce Department today.

G. R. Kinney 1930 Net Shows Decline

G. R. Kinney Company and subsidiaries for 1930 report a net income of $102,930 after interest, federal taxes etc., as against $974,606 in 1929.

Net income for 1920 was equal to $2.02 a share, earned on 50,532 shares of 8 per cent cumulative preferred as against $3.27 a share on 160,000 shares of common in the preceding year, after preferred dividends.

General Electric Employes' Report

Schenectady, N. Y., March 28—Annual report of General Electric Employes Security Corp. for 1930 shows more than 36,000 employes of General Electric Co. out of total of more than 78,000, are holders of bonds having a face value of more than $40,000,000. The company is the largest individual holder of General Electric common stock, owning more than 500,000 shares.

Electric Output Jumps 8 Per Cent

For the week ended March 21 the Associated Gas & Electric System reported electric output of 61,676,551 k. w. h., an increase of 4,550,976 k. w. h. over the like week of last year, or 8.0 per cent. Gas output for the same week totaled 377,258,100 cubic feet, a decrease of 0.1 per cent.

Packard Profit in Year Is $9,034,220

Packard Motor Car Co. reports for 1930 net profit of $9,034,220 equal to 60 cents a share, against $19,291,114, or $1.28 a share in 1929.

$10,000 Paid for Sugar 'Change Seat

New York, March 28—The second membership on New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange of H. D. Stevenson has been sold to F. Shelton Farr for $10,000.

PAEPCKE GROUP IS WINNER

Chicago, March 28—Stockholders of Container Corporation of America at the annual meeting here today registered a strong vote of confidence in the present Paepcke management, over three-fourths of the votes cast being for board of directors proposed by the management.

Board proposed by the Brunt group, who have been waging proxy fight, polled but a minor fraction of the entire vote cast, banking groups throwing votes with the Paepcke management.

Walter P. Paepcke, president, said:

"We are naturally very much pleased at the overwhelming vote of confidence given our management by stockholders.

"The intense interest which stockholders took in today's election of directors is witnessed by the fact that all but a few thousand shares of common stock were voted.

"We feel that the new board of directors is an excellent one with seven representing outside banking and other interests and four executives of Container Corporation."

New Lows Set for Oil Company Bonds

New York, March 28—Week-end dealings in the bond market saw oil company issues heavily sold, new lows being reached by Texas Corp 5s, Shell Union 5s of 49, and California Petroleum 5s.

Otis Elevator's Net $3.44 a Share

Otis Elevator Co. reports for 1930 net earnings equal to $3.44 a share on the common stock against $3.99 a share in the preceding year.

ADVICE TO INVESTORS IS FREE

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Sq., Boston. All replies are made by mail direct.

WANTS CASH

M. P. Melrose—How can I sell some Ajax Rubber which has been stricken from the Stock Exchange lists? I need the money.

Ans.—We do not know how you could convert Ajax Rubber into cash. February 11, 1931, the stock was removed from listing on the New York Stock Exchange because of the company's failure to maintain a transfer office in New York City. The stock never was an investment. No dividends have been paid since 1920, and earnings have been poor. The latest published report is for six months ended June 30, 1930, when deficit amounted to 75 cents a share. In similar period of previous year the deficit was 57 cents a share. For year ended Dec. 31, 1929, there was a deficit of $2.80 a share, the seventh annual deficit in ten years.

EARNINGS OFF

M. E., Somerville—What are the latest earnings for International Nickel? I have 75 shares at a loss.

Ans.—For year ended December 31, 1930, earnings applicable to International Nickel common after preferred dividend requirements were 67 cents a share on 14,584,025 shares. This compared with $1.47 a share on 13,757,208 shares outstanding in 1929. With quarterly payment of 15 cents a share March 31, the stock will be on an annual dividend basis of 60 cents a share, contrasted with $1 paid from September, 1929, an advance from 80 cents a share distributed from December 1928. The stock is a speculation. We could not advise on the market position.

BOUGHT HIGHER

A. Q., Quincy—I have 10 shares New York Central at 135 and a similar amount of North American common at 85. What do you think of them?

Ans.—We must decline to comment on the market position of either issue. Commencing May 1 New York Central will be on a $6 annual basis, contrasted with the recent $8 rate paid from August, 1927. Net income for 1930 amounted only to $7.21 a share, contrasted with $16.70 in 1929. Dividends in varying amounts have been paid from 1870. No cash dividends have ever been paid on North American common. The annual rate is 10 per cent in common stock. Earnings for 1930 were $4.53 a share, compared with $5.03 in 1929. The stock is a speculation.

BUCK TELLS OF KING COBRA, 'GUNMAN' OF JUNGLE

FANNING
With GEORGE UNDERWOOD

All Together Boys and Girls Break Forth Into Song! ↕ Write Winning Limericks and See Ball Games

GOOD NEWS FOR THE FANS AND FANNIES

GATHER 'ROUND us girls and fellers, baseball fans and fannies, for we're about to burst forth in song—and so are you. We're about to elucidate on something that will interest the whole family from Gran'ma down to little dog Fido. You may not know it, but pretty soon you all will be writing Limericks. You'll be sitting up nights wrinkling your domes and trying to rhyme Rye with pie, Schulmerich with any old kind of an itch, Boole with mule, Quinn with gin, and goodness knows what's not.

You see that's the way you're going to get to the old ball game. The Braves and the Red Sox soon will be with us. When Shano comes marching home again, Hurrah Hurroo, the boys will cheer, the men will shout, and the fannies will all turn out, and the Boston Evening American Limerick winners will be right up in the front seat shrieking, "Slide, Kelly, Slide!" and "Kill the Umpire!" just as loud and long as they want. Here's the idea—the germ of it, anyway.

MARANVILLE

COMMENCING soon, just how soon the Limerick editor will tell you in the Boston Evening American next Monday, there will be printed a Limerick each day. You all know what a Limerick is, a verse that goes something like this:

There was an old villian named Jack,
Who we wish would sit on a tack,
Even in his dreams
He schemes and he schemes
On jobs to put us on our back.

THE LIMERICKS you gals and fellers are going to write will be baseball ones. You know, a verse about some of the Braves and Red Sox players. For instance, take Maranville:

There was a young bucko called Rabbit,
Any ball that he'd see he would grab it,
Not a hit through short field,
The Rabbit would yield,
To Rabbit, grab it was habit.

ONLY you folks will not have to write a whole limerick—unless you want to. All you'll have to do is to supply the missing last line. You know, this way. Here's one on Wally Berger:

There was an outfielder named Wally,
To pitchers he certainly was squally,
When the ball on the seam
He'd hit, it would scream
"_____"

Now just what did the old ball scream? When the Limerick contest starts and Limericks are printed with the last line omitted, all you have to do will be to fill out the last line. If the Limerick editor thinks it is better than the one sent in by Uncle Pete or Cousin Nellie and the rest of the sheiks and frails, then you win.

BERGER

You win, what?

Get next Monday's Boston Evening American and the Limerick Editor will tell you all about it. He'll probably give the lucky winners half dozen seats for the opening game and some of the games to come; a pair of seats for the second prize winners and their girls, or someone else's girl; third prize winners, at least one ducat, etc., ad infinitum, and the Good Lord be praised.

Until next Monday, fan poets, poetesses and poetirines, a fond and affectionate adieu! Selah! Allah be praised!

JOSEPH TAYLOR GILMAN, new president of the Boston Garden, looks like the right man in the right place. He knows sport from the ground up, has a head for finance, is a bit of a diplomat, knows what the peepul want in the line of amusement, and is prepared to feed it to them.

In his athletic days, the new Garden boss was one broth of a b'y. He weighed 222 pounds in his BVD's, was as powerful as a Percheron and fast as Gallant Fox.

That's not hyperbole, for he was one of the few giant guards of his time—he played on the Dartmouth eleven of 1901-02-03-04—who would go down the fields with the ends. And despite Dartmouth then had two of the best ends in football, Al Lillard anad Ralph Glaze, big Gilman used to head them to the runner. When Joe Gilman tackled 'em—boy, he tackled 'em! He could hug like a June bride and squeeze like a grizzly.

DARTMOUTH had a wonderful aggregation of gridiron stars in Gilman's days—Bill Knibbs, who came from our home town of Worcester, where his old man ran the livery stable; "Mary" Dillon, Byron Witham, Ralph Glaze, "Cupid" Lindsey, "Bull" Turner, Bill Clough and others.

Gilman's Big Green team dedicated the Harvard Stadium with an 11-to-0 victory over the Crimson.

J. T. GILMAN

THE NEW Garden boss was born in Exeter and prepped in Exeter. He played on the same great Exeter eleven which furnished Jim Cooney, Jim Hogan and Henry Hooper, the sensational Dartmouth youngster who was chosen All-American center in his freshman year.

Hooper was a modern Hercules. He was as broad as he was tall, standing 5 feet 6 inches and weighing 236 pounds. He would have engraved his name even deeper in gridiron history if he had lived. He died in February of his frosh year at Hanover from appendicitis.

The new Garden president should team well with Ned French, president of the Boston & Maine R. R. Gilman is Dartmouth '95, and French Dartmouth '94.

No team ever has won three straight world series. Will the Athletics be able to hurdle that baseball tradition this year? . . . Now they've started an argument on brown eyes and blue eyes in baseball. . . .

The best batsmen are supposed to be the brown-eyed ones and the best pitchers blue eyed. . . . In the ring the best catchers are black-eyed.

Bring 'Em Back Alive Author Trapped by Deadly King Cobra

A king cobra is the most fearsome of jungle inhabitants—it wages uncompromising war on everything that lives and moves. If it strikes a victim, death is inevitable and Frank Buck tells you why. In this thrilling chapter of "Bring 'Em Back Alive," which also appears in his book, the author tells of the events leading up to a near tragedy.

Each chapter of this absorbing narrative—one of which is printed in the Boston Evening American every day—is a story in itself—complete and interesting.

CHAPTER XXVI

"We want a king cobra—a big one." Several times I had heard those words from Dr. Ditmars of the New York Zoological Park. For a long time I had been on the lookout for a specimen that would fill the bill without success.

The difficulties in landing a big king cobra are many. Most of the Asiatic traders and trappers that supply me with specimens of other kinds, including dangerous animals and reptiles, have a fear of cobras that makes the disquiet that all other jungle terrors arouse in them seem mild by comparison.

Usually when a sizable king cobra is available for purchase it is the result of an accident or a freakish set of circumstances, there being no regular trade in these reptiles that there is, say, in tigers and leopards.

The reason for this is that of all the creatures that dwell in the jungles of Asia it is the most vicious, being the only one that will attack without provocation. Nowhere in the world is there an animal or reptile that can quite match its unfailing determination to wipe out anything that crosses its path. This lust to kill invests the king cobra with a quality of fiendishness that puts it in a class by itself, almost making it a jungle synonym for death.

One is always thinking of it in terms of loss of life. I find myself recalling a hundred and one instances of its destructiveness. I think of the many natives, within my own experience, that have succumbed to it, of animals that suffered the same fate. I can't get out of mind, for instance, the picture of a big water buffalo, a fine robust specimen weighing about 1200 pounds, that, walking through a rice padi, had the misfortune to step too close to a ridge where a six-foot king cobra lay coiled up.

KILLS BUFFALO

The uncompromising reptile struck and the buffalo was dead in less than an hour. There is a whole series of memories of bullocks and other work animals wiped out by cobras, of the many planters I've known whose dogs suffered the horrible death that follows when His Royal Highness, King Cobra, gets his fangs into play.

It is not a more terrible venom that makes the king cobra the most dangerous of reptiles. In fact, I believe that the poisonous secretions of the Russell's viper of India and the green mamba, of African coasts, are as deadly as cobra, however, is a much bigger snake and its poison sacs contain considerably more venom. Then there is another point to consider.

The ordinary poisonous reptile makes a quick strike and injects what venom it can in a fraction of a second. When the king cobra strikes it holds its victim fast in its jaw until it has completely emptied its poison sacs. The result is an injection

Montreal, Que., March 28—Before a crowd of 12,000 of the world's wildest and most rabid fans, the Bruins and Les Canadiens clash tonight at the Forum in the third game of their series to determine the National Hockey League champion.

Due to the even break they received in the Garden, Les Canadiens are confident that they will eliminate the Bruins, for the remaining tilts of this series will be decided here. The Flying Frenchmen will have a double advantage over the Bostonmen, home ice and home crowds.

Although many Boston fans are in town to lend their support to the Bruins, it is unlikely that they will make much of an impression cheering against the thousands of Les Canadiens' supporters, particularly the organized cheering section of the Millionaires.

With the Maroons out of the running as a result of their 8-to-1 defeat by Rangers, the Montreal fans have turned to the support of the Flying Frenchmen. The detailed reports of the two games played in the Boston Garden is, to a large extent, responsible for the unprecedented highly excited condition of the local fans.

The Bruins have met with far too much success against Les Canadiens and Maroons to enjoy any noticeable popularity among the hockey followers here. They are depicted as a rough tough bunch of hombres, who refuse to stop at anything in order to gain a victory.

In the opinion of the local hockey devotees, the Bruins are responsible for the disgraceful action of the Boston fans last Thursday night

LOUGHRAN WINS FROM 'TUFFY'

Chicago, March 28 (INS)—Because he defeated Tuffy Griffith in a very neat and efficient manner last night at the Stadium, Tommy Loughran of Philadelphia, retired light-heavyweight champion, today was in line for the promised bout with Jack Sharkey this summer.

Using a protective left jab that tantalized Griffith to the point of distraction, Loughran stopped the ambitious Chicagoan's boring-in attack throughout the 10 rounds with the dispatch of a master boxer.

Griffith's defeat definitely eliminates him from the ranks of serious contenders for the heavyweight crown.

Griffith tried throughout the 10 rounds to break inside the shifting, elusive defense that Loughran resorted to throughout. Tuffy swung from a crouch, a vertical stance and then tried to rush his opponent, but Loughran was successful in using Griffith to each time with that provoking left.

When the going became a little too rough, the Philadelphian answered the boos of the 13,124 Stadium patrons by indulging in a little mixing himself, just to prove he could do it.

Frazier vs. Wright for Court Net Title

Frank P. Frazier of Newton, court tennis star of the Tennis and Racquet Club, will be making his third straight bid for the United States singles title when he lines up against William C. Wright of the Philadelphia Racquet Club in the tournament final on the Tennis and Racquet court today.

Fifth Straight for Harko

Berlin, N. H., March 28—Johnny Harko, Manchester, N. H., won his fifth straight fight here, taking a 10-round decision from Joe LeBurne of Sherbrooke, Canada.

Passing the Puck

Montreal, Que., March 28—Despite the care taken by the Forum and Les Canadiens in distributing the tickets for tonight's game, many have reached the hands of speculators, who are demanding $25 per pair, regardless of location.

President Frank Calder of the National Hockey League announced a shift in the dates for the fourth and if necessary the fifth games of the series between the Boston Bruins and Les Canadiens for the Stanley Cup.

Instead of playing Tuesday and, if necessary, Thursday, the last two games will be played Monday and Wednesday. The change is made in order that the winner of the series may enjoy an extra day of rest before defending the cup against the winner of the Chicago Blackhawks-New York Rangers series.

The final series will start either in New York or Chicago Thursday or Saturday, April 9 or 4.

Headed by Tom Fitzpatrick, the well-known Roslindale realtor and Bill Hamilton, "holy cow," arrived this morning, heavily armed with noise producing contraptions.

As Manager Art Ross did not accompany his players coming up on the Red Wing, Win Green, the efficient trainer, was in charge of the Bruins. According to no less an authority than the M. G. R. himself, Win is the most capable assistant he has ever had the good fortune to tie up with, for the "Old Veteran" is a hound for detail, decorum and discipline.

At an early hour this morning the crowd began to gather outside the Forum for the rush seats and Ernie Caron, a former well known amateur player, who is now assistant manager of the Montreal rink, ordered that the doors be opened at 3 o'clock.

As Les Canadiens' office is located in the Hotel Windsor, there was a continuous stream of fans trooping through the rounds seeking tickets.

Although Dr. Corrigan, the Flying Frenchman's physican, is an ardent Canadian rooter and accompanied the team to Boston, he has not seen a play. He tucked himself away in a corner of Les Canadiens' dressing room in the Garden and got his reports between periods.

M. J. and George Calinan made the trip here over the road and reported the traveling as ideal with the exception of a little snow in Northern New York. They left Boston yesterday morning and arrived last night.

Among the Bostonians seen in the rotunda of the Windsor today were Freddie Corcoran, the M. G. A. state handicapper; Bill Cleary, the referee; Mr. and Mrs. George Allen Roslindale; A. Perley Chase, vice-president of the Bruin Cubs; Bill Smith, of Boom Boom Club fame; Wilfred Guimet, and Johnnie Hobbs.

According to the Montreal Maroons, some of whom are recovered from their series with the Rangers, the Patrick team is the one that must be beaten in the finals.

EASTER HERO IN DEAD HEAT

Liverpool, Eng., March 28 (AP)—Easter Hero, owned by the American, John Hay Whitney, and who fell yesterday in the Grand National, today ran a dead heat with J. J. Drake's Coupe de Chateau in the Champion Steeplechase.

The race was set two mils and seven and a half furlongs, more than a mile and a half shorter than the gruelling Grand National course. The purse was 1000 sterling ($5000).

Easter Hero showed no effects of yesterday's grind and was well up with the leaders throughout.

An American's colors again showed in front in the running of the Maghull Plate at a mile and six furlongs which was won by A. C. Bostwick's Burglar.

Steve Donoghue, the famous English jockey, had the leg up on the Son of Hapsburg—Lawrenny Lass, and brought him home an easy winner. The race was worth 150 sterling ($750) and Burglar paid off at two to one. He was the favorite.

R. Benton's Sept was second and R. Cohen's Maitre third.

Premier MacDonald Sees Scotland Win

Glasgow, Scotland, March 28 (AP)—Scotland today defeated England in the 55th annual soccer match, two goals to none. The score stands: Scotland, won 25; England, 16; drawn, 14.

Premier Ramsey MacDonald and his daughter, Ishbel, were among the crowd of 100,000 which watched the match.

JOHNSON DIES WITHIN 16 HOURS OF BARNARD

A. L. LEADER ILL ONLY FEW HOURS

new Mountain Landis, commissioner of organized baseball and a stormy petrel himself, in 1927, and Barnard, then president of the Cleveland Indians, succeeded him.

Johnson, better known to baseball's millions as "Fighting Ban," died in a St. Louis hospital at 8:10 a. m. today after a lingering illness, which he resisted with his characteristic fighting qualities.

Barnard died at 4:30 p. m. yesterday at Rochester, Minn., of a heart attack. Barnard's death was wholly unexpected, but Johnson's had been expected for days. Few ever knew Barnard was ill.

Following his return from his usual tour of the spring baseball camps, he complained to a few intimate friends that he was not feeling well and that he would go to the Mayo Brothers' clinic at Rochester, Minn., for an examination. But neither he nor his friends took his illness seriously.

Johnson and Comiskey Broke in 1919

Johnson's bitter fight, which ultimately ended with his ouster from the American League, which he founded in 1900 and which he forced the National League to recognize in 1903, started during the World Series scandal of 1919, a story told with many versions.

From the best information obtainable, Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the White Sox and "baseball's old Roman," heard that the series with the Cincinnati Reds was not exactly on the square after the second game, and gave Johnson, then president of the league, what information he had.

Johnson investigated and advised Comiskey he had found nothing to get excited about. Comiskey insisted but nothing more was done until after the Reds had upset the baseball world by winning the world title.

Then the true story of how several White Sox players had "sold out" came to light. Comiskey stormed at Johnson, and the fiery Ban stormed back, and the two were never friends again.

As a result of that scandal, Landis was appointed commissioner of organized baseball, with profound dictatorial powers.

Landis, just as domineering and possessing just as stormy a nature as Johnson, established himself as the American League President. Their quarrels over baseball policies were frequently and boomed louder and louder.

Soon it was inevitable that either Landis or Johnson would have to get out of baseball. Landis, backed by most of the club owners, won out.

Johnson was ousted by the American League club owners, and Barnard, one of Johnson's greatest antagonists among the club owners, succeeded him.

Retired From Game With Broken Heart

Wild reports that Johnson would "blow up the baseball world with his "inside story," however, never materialized, as the father of the league retired broken in spirit and in health and forever kept his peace.

Barnard was the exact antithesis of Johnson in nature. He was quiet, diplomatic and silent on all reports of internal dissension, if any, in the baseball world. He and Landis harmonized perfectly and peace again reigned in the baseball world.

Just as everyone loves a fighter, right or wrong, the baseball world today mourned the passing of the two baseball chiefs, Johnson and Barnard. Messages of condolence to relatives poured in from everywhere.

Barnard's death so stunned the American League that no moves were even in progress today as to a new leader or a meeting to elect one. No one would even hazard a guess as to Barnard's probable successor.

Fortunately, Barnard ran his office "in advance," as he used to say, and there will be no necessity to rush an election.

Frank Navin, vice-president, owner of the Detroit Tigers, probably will assume charge until an election is held.

Barnard's body will be returned to Chicago tomorrow morning at 7:15 and will be shipped immediately to Cleland, his home city, for burial. Services will be held by the Knights Templar Tuesday.

Quinn Pays Tribute to Johnson and Barnard

The deaths of Ernest D. Barnard and Ban B. Johnson, the only president of the American League since its birth in 1900 were a great shock to Bob Quinn, Red Sox presy, who had known both executives for over 30 years.

"Barnard," said Quinn, "had the finest sense of honesty and square-dealing of any man ever connected with baseball.

"His death is a distinct personal loss as well as a big loss to the American League and the whole baseball world.

"Johnson's death while not so unexpected, was also a great shock to me, coming as it did so soon after the passing of Barnard.

"For more than 25 years, Johnson ruled the American League and did more than any other man to make it the great organization it is today.

"Baseball never had two greater champions and they will be remembered as long as the game is played."

Ex-Red Sox Manager May Succeed Barnard

New York, March 28 (INS)—Prominent baseball men throughout the Nation, stunned by the deaths within the past 24 hours of Ernest S. Barnard and the picturesque Ban Johnson, present and past presidents of the American League, speculated today on the question:

"Who will be the new president?"

At least half a dozen possibilities were suggested in well-informed baseball circles today, the names of the following having come up for discussion in this connection:

Edward Barrow, secretary and business manager of the New York Yankees and former manager of the Boston Red Sox.

"Billy" Evans, business manager of the Cleveland Indians.

Mayor "Jimmy" Walker of New York City.

William Harridge, secretary of the American League.

Frank Navin, president of the Detroit Tigers and vice-president of the American League.

Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Senators.

Connie Mack, manager of the world champion Philadelphia Athletics.

Landis Expresses Sorrow Over Deaths

Chicago, March 28 (INS)—Deep sorrow over the deaths of E. S. Barnard, president of the American League, and Ban Johnson, former president of that league, was expressed here today by K. M. Landis, commissioner of baseball.

Landis said he had not the "least idea" who might be chosen to succeed Barnard.

The commissioner extended his condolences to Mrs. Johnson and said that with the passing of Ban Johnson baseball had lost one of its most outstanding figures.

Concerning Barnard, he asserted that "probably nobody had a broader acquaintance in all departments of the game than he."

"Barnard," Landis continued, "was a fine combination of integrity, intelligence and industry, and his death spells not only a very great loss to the American League, but to baseball and to athletic activities everywhere.

It was a common saying that 'you don't have to have it on paper with Barney.' His word was always good."

John A. Heydler, president of the National League, sent a wire to the Chicago offices of the American League, saying "Barnard was one of baseball's most constructive workers. I have lost a friend."

Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox, expressed himself as being deeply touched at the deaths of Barnard and Johnson.

Navin Mourns Death of Ban Johnson

Detroit, March 28 (INS)—Frank Navin, president of the Detroit major league baseball team, and now acting president of the American League, through the death of the late Ernest Barnard, today declared that the death of Ban Johnson was a "great blow to me personally and to the base ball world."

Navin, vice-president of the league, succeeded to the temporary presidency through the death of Barnard. He declared that he will hold the position only long enough to allow election of a new president.

"Mr. Johnson will not be forgotten as long as the American League, his life's work, survives," declared Navin.

East Boston Wins Swimming Meet

East Boston High swimmers defeated Jamaica Plain High mermen, 81½ to 58½, and Charlestown High submerged Trade school, 70 to 40, in a pair of dual meets yesterday at Curtis hall pool, Jamaica Plain.

The diving events of the Charlestown-Trade meet will be held Thursday at the Boston "Y" pool.

J. O'Brien of Charlestown furnished the feature performance by splashing to a new record in the senior 100-yard free style. O'Brien lowered the old record of 58 seconds by a second.

TURNESA, COX TIE FOR N.-S. GOLF HONORS

Pinehurst, N. C., March 28 (AP)—Joe Turnesa of New York and Wiffy Cox, Brooklyn, today tied for first place in the North and South open golf tournament with 288's for 72 holes. They arranged a nine-hole playoff this afternoon for first honors.

First prize money in the $5650 tournament is $1500, while second place is worth $1000.

Cox, who was tied for third after 54 holes of play, shot a 71 today to reach a deadlock with Turnesa, who slipped to 73 after holding at least a stroke lead after 36 and 54 holes of play.

Rookie Backstop of Tribe Goes Home

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 28—Roy Luebbe, Braves rookie catcher, grafted from Charlotte, who sustained a broken finger in Fort Myer last Monday, left for his home in Omaha last night.

It is doubtful if he will be recalled, judging from what he showed on the ball field before his injury.

13 Ball Games for Moses Brown School

FANS TO HONOR RUEL, SOX CATCHER

By JOE CASHMAN

Harold "Muddy" Ruel lost none of his popularity among Washington fans when he was sent from the Senators to the Red Sox.

The little veteran catcher is still one of the darlings of Capital fandom and when the Sox make their first appearance of the season against the Griffmen in Washington on Sunday, April 19, all the boys and girls are going to turn out to honor "Muddy."

It is hoped by those in charge of arrangements to have President Hoover attend the game but whether or no the Chief Executive appears, it promises to be an afternoon that will live long in the memory of the popular receiver.

News that Ruel had received a split finger had the committee wondering for a while whether they would have to postpone the celebration until a later date, but Manager Collins of the Sox has assured them that "Muddy" will be in tip-top shape by April 19 and plans are nearly completed for one of the greatest "days" ever given to a player in Washington.

Braves Play Last Exhibition Game at St. Pete Today

The Braves will play their final exhibition contest of the season at St. Petersburg this afternoon, when they tackle the Cincinnati Reds in the second of a three-game series.

The first was played here last week, the Tribe winning easily, and the concluding battle will be staged at Tampa tomorrow afternoon.

On Monday the Warriors will close their Florida campaigning when they visit the St. Louis Cardinals at Bradenton.

After the game they will return to St. Pete and start packing for their trip home, which will start on Thursday.

They will go direct to Macon, Ga., for games with the Brooklyn Robins on Friday and Saturday, and then jump into Greensboro, N. C., for a Monday game with Rochester.

Two days later they will take on the Senators at Washington, and on the following afternoon they will be in Baltimore for a game with the Orioles.

Braves Due Back Home on April 10

Their next stop will be Boston on Friday, April 10, one day before they are scheduled to start a two-game city series with the Red Sox.

The Tribe will have had four days this week and will have two more next week for batting and fielding drill and should shape up much better in future exhibition games than it did in the past when it had to play 14 tilts in 15 days without sufficient preliminary work.

Manager Bill McKechnie is still trying to engineer a deal which will bolster up his pitching staff, but success isn't yet in sight.

A's May Move Over to Jersey to Play

Philadelphia, March 28—Reports are again in circulation that the Philadelphia Athletics may transfer their headquarters from Shibe Park to Camden, N. J., across the Delaware river.

According to those interested in the proposed transfer the principal reason in favor of Camden is that Sunday baseball forbidden here under the "Blue Laws" of 1791, could be played in the New Jersey city.

Eagle A Team Wins Over Team B

Coach Frank McCrehan sent his Boston College baseball squad through its first nine-inning game of the season at the Heights this morning, with Team A defeating Team B, 7 to 6.

Nearly every member of the squad was in the lineup at one time or another during the three-hour workout.

Capt. George Colbert did not play because of a split finger. His place behind the bat was taken by Earl MacIntyre, star of the freshman team last year, who showed to an advantage.

On Team B, Callery played first base; Hogan, second base; Jim Crowley, third base; Walsh, shortstop; Cutler, center field; Gleason, right field; Lane, left field, and Meir, catcher.

Barney Curtin, Pete Herman and Bill Erwin pitched for the first team, and Jim Donovan, Harry Downes and Eddie Gallagher were on the mound for the seconds.

Gallagher had the most perfect record of the pitchers for the day, allowing no hits in two innings against the regulars.

According to McCrehan, today's game settled almost every position on the team, although he will not make the final selection until after practice on Monday.

160 MINUTE TILT WORLD RECORD

Springfield, March 28—In the longest professional hockey game ever played the Springfield Indians and the Boston Bruins Cubs battled to a 2 to 2 draw in the first game of a series for the championship of the Canadian-American League.

After 160 minutes of play, with the score tied at two goals all, the game was declared a draw by agreement among President James E. Dooley of the Can-Am League and representatives of the contending clubs at 1:30 this morning.

The decision was made in view of the fact that the players were so tired they couldn't go much further and in view of the fact that the same teams must play again tonight in Boston in the second schedule game.

Springfield built up a two goal lead in the first period, with Saunders making the first goal and Carrigan the next. Runge scored for Boston in the second period and Burke tied it up in the third.

Here the score remained while the team waged a scoreless battle through the usual 10-minute overtime period, four sudden death sessions of 20 minutes each and a fifth period of 10 minutes.

The players kept trying all the way but as the game dragged into the morning hours it was apparent that neither team could score.

Play opened at a slow clip, each team being cautious, but warmed up before the halfway mark had been reached. It was just after the middle spot was reached that the Indians drew first blood.

Ten minutes had gone by when Foster and Burke evened the count on a pass from Boyd. The time was 1:45.

In the first sudden death period, the teams were palpably tired as the halfway mark was reached. At this point the Indians opened a furious drive and Heller scored, but the referee overruled the goal judge.

Cubs and Indians Play at Garden Tonight

The Bruins Cubs and Springfield Indians renewed their quest for the Fontaine cup, emblematical of the Canadian-American League championship at the Boston Garden tonight.

As an added attraction, the Bruins-Canadiens game, to be played in the Montreal Forum, will be broadcast by Frank Ryan at 10:15 o'clock or immediately following the Boston Garden game.

Larsen Victor in Bout With Brown

Brockton, March 28—Ring Larsen, of Quincy, undefeated as a middleweight, made his debut in the light heavyweight ranks here, winning a 10-round decision over Gus Brown of Canton. Larsen took seven of the 10 rounds.

Frank Herlihy, Lynn, defeated Johnny Walker of New Bedford in six rounds in the semifinal.

Indians Score Two in First Period

Five minutes later the Indians scored again, this time with Foster in the box. Callighen was checked near the cage after a rush, but Saunders got the puck, passed out to Carrigan and Gene scored at 13:37. The Indians had a wide edge in the first period.

The second period did not have the speed of the first, although successive penalties on two members of the Indians and on goalie some anxious minutes. The Indians scored while Foster and Burke were off, but the goal was not allowed.

Boston scored a goal at 14:17 with Taylor. It was Taylor's rung taking in the play. Runge made the goal, taking a wide pass from Taylor.

The third period wasn't two minutes' old before the Cubs tied the game up. With Heller in the box Burke evened the count on a pass from Boyd. The time was 1:45.

MISS SACHS INDOOR CHAMP

BEATS SARAH PALFREY IN TWO SETS

Marjorie Sachs of Cambridge swept through to victory today in the final match of the national women's lawn tennis championship tourney at the Longwood covered courts, defeating Sarah Palfrey of Brookline, top seeded player in the singles, 6—3, 7—5.

The win was a big upset for Miss Sachs, unseeded in the tournament, and not been figured as a formidable entry.

The winner went ahead for the first time in the match in the fifth game, but Miss Palfrey quickly got back on even terms by grabbing the sixth.

The next two games and the points went to Miss Sachs as a result of her hard stroking.

Miss Palfrey took the opening game of the second set but faded as Miss Sachs won the next two. Sarah came back to capture the fourth and fifth games and the lead. Then Miss Sachs rallied and grabbed off the next two sets.

Sachs won the eight and ninth games to go into a 5-4 lead, but when Miss Sachs swept through the remaining three games to win the title.

La Barba Wins Over Kid Francis

New York, March 28 (US)—As a flyweight, Fidel Labarba was good enough to be champion.

As a featherweight he was much better, as he gave Francesco Buenaagua, a Filipino whom Frankie listed into cauliflower language, means Kid Francis, a sound thrashing in New York's Madison Square Garden last night.

As result of this victory, Fidel appears next in line for a championship bout with the featherweight titleholder, Bat Battalino.

Miss Van Wie Wins Mid-South Title

Southern Pines, N. C., March 28—Virginia Van Wie won the mid-south golf championship here with a total of 157 for 36 holes.

Her score was three strokes better than the next best in a field of 60 contenders, Edith Quier of Reading, Pa., who had 164.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

You will never make good shots, nor swing smoothly and effectively until you so master the start of the back swing that it is done easily, gracefully and with smoothness. You must forget all about your intention to hit the ball a mighty wallop. That is supposed to be uppermost in always fatal thought of hard-hitting golfers. Let your stiff-legged tension never added anything that's know of to a golf swing except disaster. The starting of the back swing can be practiced anywhere—home, office or golf course. It is not well to be actually conscious of it when you are playing golf, so the best course is to practice it until you have built into your muscles the action of shoving away with the left arm, right elbow fixed near the hip, left arm just grazing your body as it moves across—left hand reaching toward your right hip—and from that position, hands sweeping slightly downward, outward and around. First get that fixed in your system and I guarantee the first half or two-thirds of your golfing troubles will be disposed of.

Bring 'Em Back Alive

By FRANK BUCK with EDWARD ANTHONY

from which recovery is impossible, the agents being too saturated with the killing fluid.

No other snake injects so much poison and no other snake does so thorough a job of dispatching its victim. Swiftly and agonizingly death comes, no more certain or painful death having been visited upon man or beast.

Nine times out of ten the mere smell of a human being will send a tiger scurrying off into the jungle. The same is true of the leopard. Even the savage sladung (wild jungle buffalo), considered by many the most formidable of all animals, has no desire to pit himself against man unless wounded or cornered. The presence of mankind is the signal for a hasty retreat.

IMPREGNABLE FOE

The sudden appearance of a native child has been known to stampede a whole herd of wild elephants. The cobra alone refuses to admit that man is anything to worry about. Cross his path anywhere at any time and he'll raise two or three feet of his body off the ground, stretch out his great hood and go for you.

The only king cobras in this country when Dr. Ditmars was prodding all the dens in search of one for him were specimens four and five feet long. I had opportunities to pick up such cobras, but they did not interest me.

I was on the lookout for one that measured at least nine or ten feet.

For some time my efforts were unrewarded. Traders kept showing me king cobras that looked like shoestrings 'til I almost decided that the species was going back.

Then one day I had a stroke of luck. I was up on the northeastern border of Johore looking over some tigers. At the height of the bargaining (just as I was saying that while these were good tigers I could not agree with the trader who was giving me a line of high pressure Asiatic sales talk that they were the finest pair ever caught) an old Malay Sakai, looking like a octogenarian monkey, came by with a box on his head.

He opened up a string of sentences in a Malay dialect that was a bit beyond me. Only two of the words escaped me. One thing to me: "Ular," which means "snake," and "ringgel," which means "lofted."

Two words out of about two hundred lines of a person's age, but they told me all I needed to know. If I would part with the trader of my affections I have this snake that this apelike Sakai was carrying on his head. Sakais—all—are afraid of them, at any rate—look so much like monkeys I've been tempted more than once to bring home some specimens and exhibit them.

The offer of a snake wasn't any cause for excitement. Most reptiles made me yawn. I had looked at so many for weeks that meant absolutely nothing to me that when I asked the old man to take the box off his head and let me have a look at the contents I was merely operating on the principle that there is no harm in looking.

It didn't take me long to see that the old baboon had something remarkable to offer — the largest king cobra I had ever seen. In fact, it later proved to be the biggest in the world. The record had been held for years by a specimen 12 feet six inches long, preserved in alcohol in the Raffles Museum at Singapore.

RECORD MONSTER

It developed that the monster I found myself looking at that day in northern Johore was almost a foot longer. Four years later my record was broken by a 15-foot specimen that was killed on a rubber estate near Ipoh. This snake might well be mounted and is exhibited today in the Raffles Museum.

I was excited. So was Ali, who accompanied me on this trip. But we saved our handspringing till later. Those too much pleasure over a specimen a native offers you for sale and you lay yourself open to heavy trying to convince the wretch that he's mistaken in his suddenly acquired belief that what he is selling is the most precious thing in the world.

I asked the Sakai how much he wanted. "Se-puloh ringgit (ten dollars, Straits money)," came the reply.

I gave him the ten dollars and the giant king cobra was mine. The old man hurried off into the jungle. His being a Sakai was enough to accomplish that, for there is no savage people anywhere in the world than these descendants of the aboriginal possessors of the Malay peninsula. They hardly ever come out of the jungle where they live with a tribal economy that knows no benefits of civilization as clothes. Serene in their nakedness, it would never occur to them to think of the need for clothes any more than such thoughts would enter the minds of the birds and beasts around them.

To the Malays, the Sakais are a lost people, barbarous and unenlightened, which is by way of showing that even in jungle country there is a class system. This is understandable, of course; for the Malays are a civilized lot compared with the primitive Sakais.

CAVE IN JUNGLE

The Malays are not above trading with the Sakais, but their method of dealing with these wild tribesmen, whom they seek out in their camps, tells the whole story of the superiority of the feel. If a Sakai has anything to offer he is told to deposit it at an appointed place and withdraw.

The Malay trader then places alongside the Sakai offering the merchandise he is willing to give in exchange. They bargain back and forth with at least 20 feet separating them until the deal is closed.

In fairness to the Malays it is necessary to point out that they shun the Sakais not merely because they consider them a inferior people, but for the practical reason that most of these monkey-like jungle-folk suffer from skin disease. They are forever scratching themselves like the simians they resemble, industriously working their fingers over the queer, shiny and sometimes scaly, skin that is so common among them.

The average Malay considers the Sakais worse than pigs, out of business, and God knows a Malay trader hasn't time for a tribe of Sakais have something to offer that he can convert into profits he loses no time in heading for their camp.

I was anxious to hear from the old Sakai how he had come by the tremendous cobra he had on his head, one of the Asiatic jungle's strangest products, he stood before me hugging his 10 Straits dollars to his chest, greatly pleased with his bargain and smiling that I might get a good look at the hideous black stumps that once were teeth.

A sack of bones encased in a dark brown skin—the Sakais are darker than the Malays!—he looked half-starved, though this was no indication that he was. For at least 50 of his 70 or more years of life—he might have been 80, for all anyone could tell!—he probably had had the same starved look.

FREAKS OF LONGEVITY

There are freakish examples of longevity everywhere in Asia —old men who all their lives look as if they can't possibly last another minute and who succeed in outliving by many years thousands of their huskier-looking brethren.

The old Sakai was all dressed up and I couldn't help wondering how many years he had wanted those habiliments in and donned for his appearance in the village where we met. On those rare occasions when a Sakai ventures out of his camp it is invariably for him to put on some clothes or the Malays will not permit him to enter their villages.

The old man's gala attire—(darned gala for a Sakai)—consisted of a crane-red sarong and a dirty rag wrapped turban-fashion around his head. With one hand he scratched himself, with the other he continued to hug to his chest his $10.

I asked him to get from him the story of how he had come into possession of the king cobra. The old man, accustomed to being shunned, was pleased when he learned that I wanted to hear his story and the snake freely rattling on so rapidly when he became excited that I marveled at Ali's ability to follow him. Never have I heard a weirder jumble of sounds than came from his lips in those overwrought moments.

Authentic Malay isn't especially easy to understand; and, when you hear a strange version of it—a local dialect—spoken by a stimulated old man who is probably getting his first chance to talk in years, the subject is unlike anything else that ever reached human ears.

The man would never regret asking how he (the old Sakai) had succeeded in the tremendous undertaking. Perhaps the man would never again hear such a tale. Before he finished his story he repeated over and over again. All later told me that I had done well to take his story as I was at. All said, he was trying to prolong the novelty of having an audience.

SLEEPING VICTIM

One night when the jungle was a bit chill and damp, he and his comrades started a fire. Sakais have a habit of rolling in the warm ashes on such occasions. One of the men, passing through these strange gymnastics when he felt something strike him in the chest, instinctively he reached out and grabbed it, yelling for all he was worth. As he did so he sprang up in horror, some of them half asleep, were other Sakais.

Then they heard their fellow tribesman cry out they jumped up to see what was wrong. They found him holding an enormous king cobra. (It would not have been difficult for him to do this as the reptile has no great power in its body like constrictor snakes. Seeking a warm place the reptile had come into the Sakai camp. Lying directly in this path of the jaw devil who was warming himself, the man raised up and struck when he felt the rolling along to violate the privacy of its resting place.

As the victim kept shrieking Awas (as he had been bitten by a wiar, one of the Sakais who had scrambled up out of the ashes got a firm hold on the snake behind the head and took it away from his doomed comrade.

Only a Sakai would have had the nerve to do that. Among these wild people is found a knowledge of animals and reptiles that is equalled only by their courage in dealing with them. Strangely enough, his capacity for making these queer jungle-folk feel like so much dirt, on frighten them.

The man with the snake yelled for a fire. He would cut the creature's head off. Our skinny old man, who had shaken himself out of his slumbers and joined the group, ruled no. He was the chief of the tribe (we hadn't realized that we were in the presence of a tribal leader) and what he said was law. He wanted the snake alive.

Why kill it when it could be sold to the next Malay trader that came along? In all the time he had lived in the jungle—he was sure it was 100 moons—he had never seen so big a cobra and he felt sure it would fetch a good price.

The Sakai who was holding the snake had a very good grip on the reptile. Without interrupting the operations, a long pole and strips of rattan were hurriedly secured and the cobra was stretched out and lashed to the pole. Later it was transferred to an old wooden box that a Malay trader had left behind.

Meanwhile the women of the camp were making a great todo. One of them—the official healer who was also a Sakai jungle's strangest products, he stood before me hugging his 10 Straits dollars to his chest, greatly pleased with his bargain and smiling that I might get a good look at the hideous black stumps that once were teeth.

A sack of bones encased in a dark brown skin—the Sakais are darker than the Malays!—he looked half-starved, though this was no indication that he was. For at least 50 of his 70 or more years of life—he might have been 80, for all anyone could tell!—he probably had had the same starved look.

DUSEK TAKES PART IN TWO BOUTS

By JACK CONWAY

Jim Londos scored a comparatively easy victory over Gino Garibaldi in their second meeting at the Boston Garden. The Greek Adonis tossed his Italian rival in 34m. 4s. with an inside crotch hold, body lift and slam.

Londos was at his best and was complete master of the situation from the start. He paved the way for his winning hold by countering with three headlocks. He then clamped on a leg hold which caused Gino considerable trouble.

Jack Conway about to pin him. Garibaldi broke the hold.

After he had recovered, Londos clamped on an inside crotch hold, lifted Garibaldi in the air and threw him to the canvas. Just as Jack Conway, Londos was about to pin him, Garibaldi broke the hold.

Londos immediately scored with another inside crotch hold, whirled Gino around a couple of times and sent him to the mat in defeat.

Dusek Takes Part in Two Bouts

Rudy Dusek proved himself to be the Iron Man of the Garden tonight when he engaged in two bouts at Ray Fabiani's show. Dusek first tossed "Wee Willie" Davis, dormant captain of the Virginia football team, in 16m. 31s. with a headlock followed by a body slam.

George Hagen, who was to have wrestled Matron Kirilenko, Russian champion, in the semifinal, failed to put in an appearance. Dusek was pressed into service to meet Kirilenko. Rudy lasted the 45 minutes but lost the decision.

Years ago Bull Montana wrestled in a preliminary at the old Mechanics Building on the Grand Opera House and on the same evening appeared in a main bout at Marlboro.

Jim McMillen, former Illinois star, and Dick Daviscourt, of California, were 30 minutes in a draw.

Chief Jennings, an Indian grappler, disposed of Farmer Bill Nelson of St. Louis in 11m. 21s. An overarm hold and body slam won for the chief.

George and Lutze in Big Bout of Season

The most important wrestling bout of the season will be staged at the Arena on next Thursday night, when Ed George, world's champion, defends his title against Nick Lutze of Southern California in a finish bout, best two falls out of three.

Lutze and George have each secured training quarters in Boston. They will each work out for two hours each day.

Lutze stated today he is confident his famous arm lock and reverse back fall will enable him to end the champion down to defeat.

George has called off all minor bouts so that he will be able to devote all of his time from now on to getting ready for the match with Lutze. Ed realizes he was on the verge of defeat when Lutze met with an injury in their last match.

at the Garden. Listening to the comments of the fans in this neck of the woods, on the unsportsmanlike conduct of the Boston fans, one would be led to believe that it was the Bruins themselves and not their alleged well wishers who littered the Garden ice with debris.

Although Montreal fans are outspoken and 100 per cent for the home club, they refrain from throwing missiles on the ice. Les Canadiens put a stop to such actions by agreeing to donate to some worthy charity the sum of $100 after every game during which there was no program, paper, etc., throwing episodes.

The Bruins and Les Canadiens arrived here last night and after a night's rest are ready. Although no player was seriously injured during the Boston games, practically all of them are carrying mementos of the first two encounters.

The Garden fans arrived this morning. Due to the scarcity of tickets only about 150 Bruin enthusiasts were able to be present.

The Bruins realize that they are facing a tremendous task to win two games at the Forum but they are not conceding the Flying Frenchmen an edge by any means. The Forum is one of the most difficult spots for referees to avoid being ruled by mob psychology. Like all hockey followings, the crowd is most partisan but unlike most hockey gatherings, knows its hockey.

By Percival Christopher Wren, Author of MYSTERIOUS WAYE

BEAU GESTE BEAU IDEAL

SYNOPSIS: Dr. Charters has every reason to regret the presence of John Waye as a patient in his nursing home. Solely because he knows criminal facts about the doctor, the stranger has been admitted to obtain for himself an alibi for the murder of "Spider" Schlits, one of Charters' confederates in a big diamond haul in Antwerp. Waye repulses a pistol attack by Charters' right-hand man, Mr. James, and then causes a rift between Charters and his associate, Dr. MacAdoo, whose evil past he also knows, by telling the latter to demand of Charters a half share of the "Lauderdell 10,000 pounds." This involves an attractive patient, Marjorie Lauderdell, whose aunt was a companion of Charters' gangster days. Charters, enraged and startled when MacAdoo asks a bigger "cut" in the Lauderdell business, demands the source of his information.

CHAPTER 11

Ten Thousand Reasons

Dr. Charters, bending over his seated patient, calmly repressed Dr. MacAdoo backward into the chair with the ruler, and stared into his eyes.

"Who told you about the 10,000 pounds?"

Dr. MacAdoo blinked, the pressure of the end of the ruler increased slightly, and he tried to withdraw his eyes from the hypnotic gaze that held them.

"Do I get my share?"

"You do."

"How much?"

"Ten-thousand."

"On your word of honor?"

"Half. On my word of honor. Who told you? The fee was ten thousand dollars?"

"This man Waye."

"Why?"

"This man Waye. And he told me to tell you I ought to get my share. . . ."

Unhappy

Dr. Charters sat down in his chair, passed his hand across his face, and then rested his brow upon his hand as he stared in fear and amazement at Dr. Manoel Machado.

Marjorie Lauderdell, sitting at her window, looking unhappy, resentful, pondered the implications of the peculiar conduct of this strange person, Mr. Waye. For his conduct had been peculiar with regard to herself, quite a trifle peculiar, in her letter in which I begged him to come and fetch me, but has also had one from Dr. Charters saying that I mustn't take any notice of my nonsense. Aunt Maud could easily persuade him that it would be very foolish to take me out of Dr. Charters' hands.

"Will you please forgive my rudeness and help me if you can?

"Yours very sincerely,

"MARJORIE LAUDERDELL.

"Oh, Mr. Waye, I'd give anything to get away from here. I do so loathe Nurse Jones — and that man James."

Marjorie sat at the window, hoping for sight of John Waye; but it was not until the following morning that, on one of her many excursions through the window, she saw him strolling on the turf.

Snatching her letter from its place of concealment, she waited until Waye glanced up at her window as he passed. Receiving, she dropped the letter to the grass some 20 feet below her window, and heard Waye's John Waye sauntered to the spot.

Can't Understand

"I can't understand why I've had no answers from my uncle. I don't believe my letters have been posted—or else that his letters to me are stopped. Other letters, too, that I know should have come in answer to mine. It sounds absurd and ridiculous, I know, but I can't help thinking it. I'm perfectly certain that Uncle Will would come here at once and help me if he frightful row if he knew how I feel.

"He's weak, and he's under Aunt's thumb, but he is quite kind always. What is most likely is that Aunt has had my letter in which I begged him to come and fetch me, but has also had one from Dr. Charters saying that I mustn't take any notice of my nonsense. Aunt Maud could easily persuade him that it would be very foolish to take me out of Dr. Charters' hands.

"Will you please forgive my rudeness and help me if you can?

Perfect Stranger

And yet what else could one say or do when a perfect stranger, supposed to be mad, came and uttered mysterious warnings against taking the medicine that was prescribed for one in an extremely nervous condition? Home?

But then again, her medicine did not agree with her. . . . Not even the medicine she was having now, from Dr. Charters, really had a quite different from the stuff she had had from that beastly Dr. Gibbs.

She did want help and advice.

That horrible James man! . . . What she wanted, however, was anything, was help to get away from the place, for there was not a soul in the house she could trusted. Not even the Head Sister, Nurse Weldon, though she liked her brother. Would Sister Weldon take her to see him, and would the Doctor let her go?

Marjorie was all right, of course, but one only saw her at meals, and now that they were keeping one upstairs one really hardly saw her at all.

How foolishly she had behaved when Mr. Waye came and walked up and down on the lawn beneath her window and looked at her, and she had run from him like a frightened rabbit!

Still it would be nice to see him, to be able to talk to, to tell that she believed that her "illness" was actually due to the medicine that was being given her, that she believed her letters were withheld from her, and that she did not believe that the late years.

were she posted downstairs were ever sent out of the house.

If she did get a chance to speak to him again, and told him all this, would he laugh at her, refuse to take her seriously and say he could not help her—simply because there was no occasion or need for any help?

No. He had been sane enough when he had said, "Never take any medicine here. None what-ever—no matter what it is—unless Dr. Studley gives it to you. Insist on having him as your doctor."

He always looked at her so kindly, so understandingly, so meaningly, as though he had something he wished to say to her.

Or was she becoming sentimental and imagining things about the man? Nobody kept here was enough to make the most sensible person stodgy and unstrung.

If only he would come along now, and would signal to him. And then what? Ask him to wait while she wrote a note that she would throw him down.

She would write it now and have it ready.

"Dear Mr. Waye," wrote Marjorie—

"I am very sorry that I was so rude when you wished to be helpful; and although I still think the idea of being helpful, I want to apologize and say exactly the opposite. I do want help, for I am getting frightened. It seems too silly I know, in words, but I really believe that I am not really ill at all. I believe I was deliberately made 'ill' at home and am being kept 'ill,' although I refused to have anything more to do with Dr. Charters and his methods. I believe Mr. Charters' medicine is just as bad, for I have felt worse each time I've taken it. I'm going to take your advice. I shall pretend to take it, but throw it away instead. But what shall I do if Nurse Jones or Sister Weldon stands over me?

HOOVER NEARS GEORGIA COAST ON WAY HOME

U. S. S. Arizona, March 28 (AP) —Overnight the President and members of the presidential party have changed from the summer whites they used in the tropical climate of Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands, to winter blue.

The battleship Arizona, about 300 miles off the coast of Georgia today, ploughed steadily northward into a northeaster, which made rough sailing.

The President was up and about early and for the first time in a week wore a heavy overcoat as he walked about the deck. The ship is expected to arrive at Norfolk Sunday, with the party reaching Washington before bedtime.

In the midst of the rough weather last night a mimic battle was staged between the Arizona and the destroyer Du Pont. The Arizona's big 14-inch guns were swung into position, but were not fired. The Du Pont used as a first aid to mark the trail of a torpedo which probably would have sunk the Arizona.

Newport, R. I., March 28 (AP)—Capt. William Holt, Newport's oldest citizen and one of the most famous of her far-famed sea dogs, is 100 years old today. He's spry and up-to-the minute and doesn't let such "100 years" fool anyone into thinking he's old. Capt. Holt reads the papers daily. Close to 70 years ago he first shipped on a schooner for the fishing banks.

Port of Boston News

By JAMES J. DELANEY

Receipts of fish at the principal New England ports during February aggregated 27,145,253 pounds of which Boston received 23,914,328 pounds, report of the Bureau of Fisheries of the Department of Commerce show.

Boston's receipts were valued at $943,350, while total New England receipts were worth $1,058,880.

GALE HALTS SHIPS

Despite the fact that a moderate northeast gale continued to sweep along the east coast, many of the outbound steamers held in port went out from the upper harbor or roads yesterday, while the inbound steamers, compelled to anchor or heave to by the force of the gale, came in. Tied up here because of the gale the steamer Culberson, bound out to Montevideo and Buenos Aires, by way of Philadelphia and other ports during the night because of the gale, got away. Finding the going rough outside Boston Light the steamer Grecian put back for anchorage in the roads. Others held up by weather, but who got away, were the Ontario for Philadelphia, William H. Page for Norfolk and the Eastern Crown for Newport News.

STORM DAMAGED

Damage to deck fittings and stern plates was sustained by the Dutch steamer Palembang when she was struck with a series of gales which swept tons of water over her decks in passage here from Batavia, Singapore, Belawan-Deli and Sebang. Tea, rubber, sago flour, pepper and other miscellaneous shipments which made up her cargo are being unloaded at Pier 3, East Boston. Shortly after the vessel docked she was searched by the customs special duty squad for narcotics and other contraband but none was found. The freighter's crew includes 26 Chinese.

SISAL LANDED

Plymouth received its first shipment of Haytian sisal ever landed at the historic port when the Royal Netherlands steamer Flora arrived there with 250 tons of the commodity loaded at Cape Haytian and Port de Paix for the Plymouth Cordage Co. Due to the storm the steamer had to anchor in Buzzards Bay for 24 hours before going through the Cape Cod Canal. She left for New York to load again for Hayti.
